SELASSIE MAKES FINAL APPEAL TO LEAGUE ASSEMBLY

"SAVE MY BROKEN PEOPLE"

HARSH INDICTMENT OF FIFTY-TWO NATIONS

Geneva, June 30.

Speaking with dignity, but the utmost bitterness, Emperor Haile Selassie to-day indicted Italy and the League of Nations alike when he addressed the League Assembly after Senor Cantillo, the Argentine representative, had eloquently pleaded for non-recognition of territorial acquisitions obtained by force.

Senor Cantillo pointed out that the Argentine was obliged to reconsider her membership in the League if practical universality of the principle of justice were secured.

Emperor Haile Selassie, in moving his declaration, dwelt upon the horrors of poison gas warfare, telling how this form of death was sprayed across a countryside by groups of nine to eighteen planes, exterminating soldiers, civilians and cattle, poisoning pastures and drinking water.

"To denounce these terrible tactics, nobody but myself, supported by comrades in arms who have seen them, would have been adequate here at Geneva. Hence I come to bear witness of this crime against my people."

The Negus emphasised that his efforts to unify Ethiopia had been blocked by Italian machinations.

Long Preparation For War

Italy had been preparing for war for fourteen years, he said, but the League would not have taken the development as it is a certain European country had not felt it necessary to obtain friendship with Italy. A treaty had really affected the course of events, he charged.

"When fifty-two countries here, in 1919, including some of the strongest in the world, assured me that an aggressor would not be successful, had confidence the League would triumph," he said.

Unir Embargoes

After "unir"ing the embargoes, preventing Ethiopia getting supplies, with Italy abundance of munitions, the League what real assistance to Italy states had granted to Italy for the Covenant.

Unir Italian proposals to give Italy and to betray my people declared.

I am ending the cause of the League," he insisted.

Appd No Sanctions

European countries, he said, applied no sanctions to Italy. Other Governments, claiming their adherence to principles, took every step to ensure those principles being put into effect. Ethiopia appeals for assistance were ignored.

"Is Article XVII?" the Negus asked.

Addis Ababa-Djibouti railway, he said, was occupied by the Italians, he said, for my occupation.

SELASSIE CHEERED IN GENEVA

ON WAY TO SPEAK TO ASSEMBLY LENGTHY PLEA CONTEMPLATED

Geneva, June 30.

The Emperor of Ethiopia was cheered when he arrived at the League of Nations buildings to-day to address the Assembly. He was a frail and dignified figure.

He arrived shortly after the Assembly had begun its session. Mr. Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, reading a letter from M. Edouard Benes of Czechoslovakia, resigning the presidency.

There was no demonstration when the Emperor first entered the hall. That came later, led by Italian newspapermen in the press gallery.

M. Paul van Zeeland, the Prime Minister of Belgium, was elected President of the Assembly.

At this stage it was understood that the Emperor intended to deliver a long speech in Amharic, in which he would urge the continuance of sanctions against Italy.

M. van Zeeland, of Switzerland, opposed the idea of the Emperor speaking to the Assembly, but Mr. Eamon de Valera, of the Irish Free State, supported the Emperor's wishes, and it was finally decided that the matter would be left to the Emperor himself, in consultation with the President of the Assembly.

M. van Zeeland spoke early in the proceedings, declaring their difficulties were great, but that if they were determined to overcome them they would assure themselves a better basis for the future peace of the world.

The Italian note, dealing with the crisis, which was first seen by League officials yesterday, was then handed in. It contains sixteen pages and expresses the conviction that the League requires reform. It adds that Italy is willing to collaborate in that work.

Italy Resentful

Rome, June 30.

The admission of the Emperor of Ethiopia to the meeting of the League Assembly has caused a bad impression in Italy, as it is regarded as a set-back to the Italian effort to co-operate with Europe and the League.

LEAGUE ASSEMBLY BATTLE

ITALIAN PRESSMEN REMOVED

FIGHT WITH USHERS

Geneva, June 30.

The press gallery demonstration directed against the Emperor of Ethiopia, which broke out at the session of the League of Nations Assembly to-day, was evidently an organised affair and dozens of journalists were implicated, including some of the best known writers in Italy, like Signor Ciani, President of the Fascist Journalists' Syndicate, and Dr. Capri, a professor of Milan University.

All doubtless, will be forbidden access to the League's chambers henceforth, though they will not be punished otherwise.

The demonstrators were subjected to considerable rough handling by the police and ushers who arrived to quell the disturbance, and of the ushers, a former European lightweight champion boxer, felled an Italian journalist who tried to prevent the removal of one of his colleagues.

During the brawl M. Nicolae Titulescu, the President of the Assembly, stood up and shouted at the press gallery members to "cease their barbaric savagery."

The Negus alone was not excited, though he looked on in wonder and was obviously a little pained.

STRIKERS OCCUPY ALL PREMISES EVEN CHURCH "OCCUPIED"

Paris, June 30.

Two curious stay-in strikes in France are reported.

At Toulons bank employees have occupied all the leading bank premises, in pursuance of a decision to strike for the same pay as that given to Marseilles bank employees.

The moment chosen was most inopportune as this is the last day of the month when payments are due, but no salaries could be given.

Meanwhile, decorators at work on the English church at Mentone are staying in, eating and sleeping in the church, despite the protest of the clergy, until their demands are met.

KING SEES NAVY'S NEW SPEEDBOAT

British Answer To Air Menace

WELL-ARMED CRAFT

(Special To "Telegraph")

London, June 30.

His Majesty the King saw the Royal Navy's latest acquisition—a sixty-mile-an-hour torpedo boat designed by Scott-Paine, the famous motor boat racing pilot—when he paid his first visit to the Navy since his accession, to-day, at Portsmouth.

After inspecting the shore establishments, His Majesty boarded the torpedo boat, the first of twelve such craft built or building.

Experts believe that these craft, thirteen of which would cost less than one destroyer, may prove the Navy's answer to air attack, as their terrific speed and small dimensions would make them almost impossible to hit with a bomb from an aeroplane.

Each boat has torpedo tubes and depth charges and bristles with machine-guns. There are good quarters for a crew of five.

The King boarded the vessel at Portsmouth and she speeded out into open water. As she increased her pace, great waves broke over her and her stern was almost submerged.

At Spithead the King stood beside the officer-in-charge as he fired a torpedo. His Majesty remained at sea for half an hour.

KWANGSI ARMIES ATTACK

Alleged Entry Of Kiyang

"OFFICIAL" REPORT?

Shanghai, July 1.

A Japanese report published here to-day quotes a Kwangsi communique as announcing that troops from that province had clashed with Central Government forces and had captured Kiyang, in Hunan, on June 28.

The Kwangsi troops had progressed, entering Taying, further to the north-east on June 29, the report declared.

The communique also stated that a second column of Kwangsi soldiers was advancing north in the direction of Paoting, and had engaged in skirmishes with Central Government troops.

ST. LOUIS BACK IN LEAD

WINS TWICE OVER PITTSBURGH

CHICAGO OUT OF ACTION

New York, June 30.

Rain again interfered with the Big League's baseball schedule to-day and half of the teams were out of action on account of soaked grounds.

By winning a double-header while Chicago was inactive, St. Louis went back to the top of the National League.

St. Louis won a double victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates to-day. The first was a final win, two to one, although the Cardinals only hit three times to the Pirates' eight. The game was without errors.

There was a good deal of luck in St. Louis' second win, for again seven hits yielded four while eleven hits gave Pittsburgh only three. Pirates had two errors.

Boston gave the New York Giants a push down the ladder, winning a close engagement by seven to six, when the teams hit well, registering thirteen and eleven respectively. Boston had two errors.

The Philadelphia-Brooklyn game was postponed.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

There was only one engagement in the American League, when the leading New York Yankees advanced at the expense of Boston Red Sox. The Yankees hit fourteen times to score ten runs, Gehrig and Hoag contributing homers in the first game. Boston hit eight times and scored five. Each had two errors.

In the second of the series, New York again won six to three, Gehrig hitting a homer which decided the issue. Boston hit ten and New York eight.

The Detroit-Chicago, Cleveland-St. Louis, and Washington-Philadelphia games were all postponed.

MOTORING PAGE

We set the money moving

LET us write about the new taxation that Government has imposed upon us in terms of cash. In other words, let us try to estimate the millions of dollars motorists spend on petrol, oil, licences, fines, garaging, and so forth, and then see what would happen if we were to suddenly stop using our cars.

We can give only approximate figures.

They are sufficiently impressive. They should be studied by all who are rather inclined to sneer at the expenditure of motorists, by the police who harass us, and by the Government who overtaxes us.

This, as usual, will be a record year for motoring. More cars are on Hongkong roads to-day than ever before.

Factories throughout the world have been working overtime making cars of all types to supply the increased demand from every part of the Empire.

There will be at least 1,000 new cars on Hongkong's road this year. The motor industry is experiencing a minor boom, due, no doubt, to the gradual ending of the depression.

It is estimated that given sunny weather, there will be an average of 4,000 cars on the roads during week-end days.

4,000

Cars

On an average each of the 4,000 cars will carry three people, making a total of 12,000.

The cars will consume about 10,000 gallons of petrol each week-end day. During the Summer we will pay over $4,000,000 for our week-end petrol alone.

We will use 100,000 gallons of oil in six months.

During 1936 contribution to the Hongkong Treasury for motor licences, and duty on petrol and oils will amount to $918,000.

$30,000 In Fines

If the average of fines is kept up, car owners during this period may expect to pay, mostly for trivial technical offences, a sum of $30,000.

Assuming that only half of the car owners garage their cars, this item in the bill will come to roughly $25,000.

Still working on averages, the number of tyres consumed will be 8,000. It should be remembered that the life of a tyre to-day is often 20,000 miles.

Taking the modest estimate of seventy miles a week the 4,000 vehicles will cover a total mileage of 14,000,000, which is very long distance.

If all the motor-cars in the Colony were removed from the roads as a result of increased taxation, finances would be in a sorry state.

Hedgerow Buffets

With fortunes spent on the highways it is surprising that we do not have wayside hotels in the New Territories.

Really first-class motoring hotels are unknown in Hongkong. The good hotels are making money in England. Motorists go out on their way to find them.

One thing that is holding up efficient roadside catering is our licensing laws.

Many enterprising caterers would like to start hedgerow buffets, such as the Dairy Farm buffet at the 11½ mile bench, where motorists, nearly always in a hurry, would be able to have a quick, light meal and get on with their journey.

But a buffet without alcoholic refreshment, is not much of an attraction.

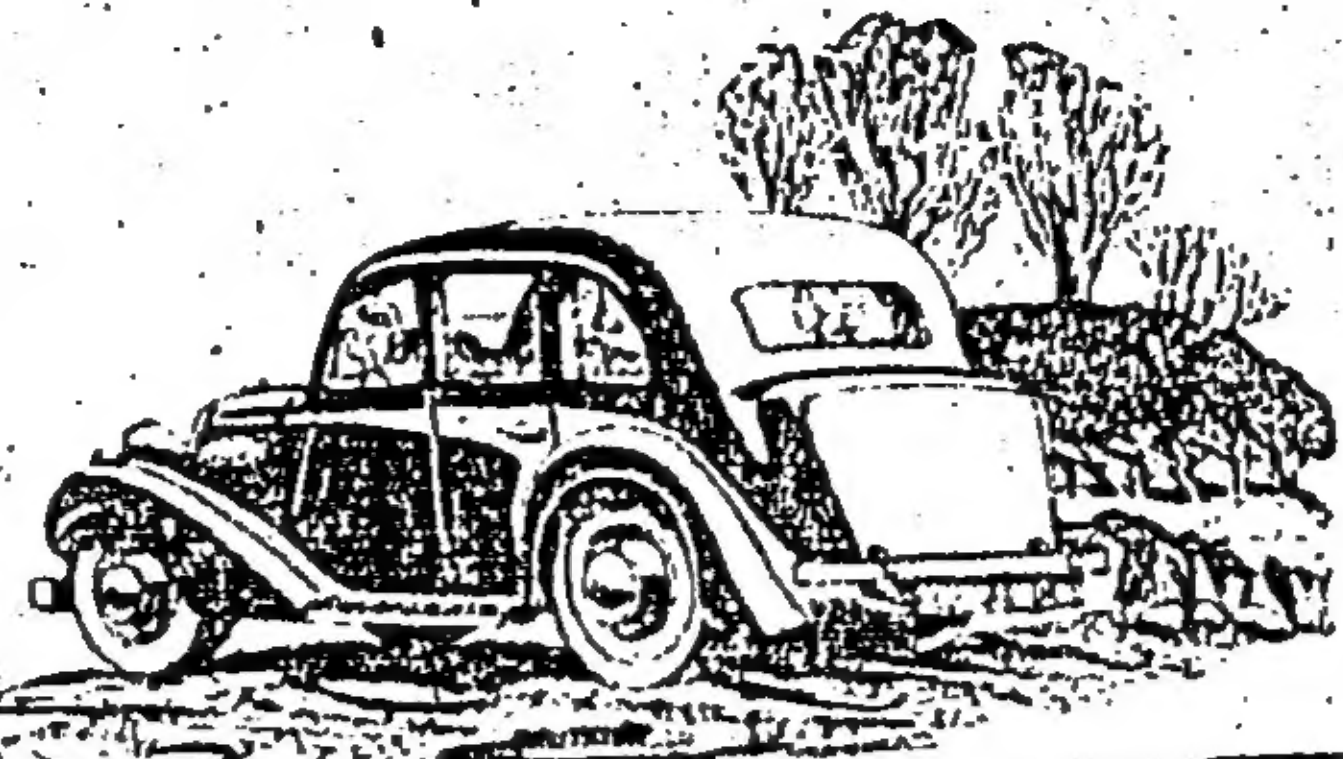

Why not add to the attraction of a round-the-Territories drive for tourists by adopting the British law of the bona-fide traveller, who was allowed a drink at any hour if he could prove that he was on a journey?

Famous Aces tell you how to drive: Norman Black on CORNERING

ON approaching corner brake in plenty of time. Do not wait until you get there. If, owing to the oversteering of the corner, the gradient of the road, the amount of traffic on the road at the time, or for any other reason, you have to change into a lower gear, do so before reaching the corner.

Go round "on the engine" so to speak. This means do not go round the corner, unless in exceptional cases, decelerating, but accelerating.

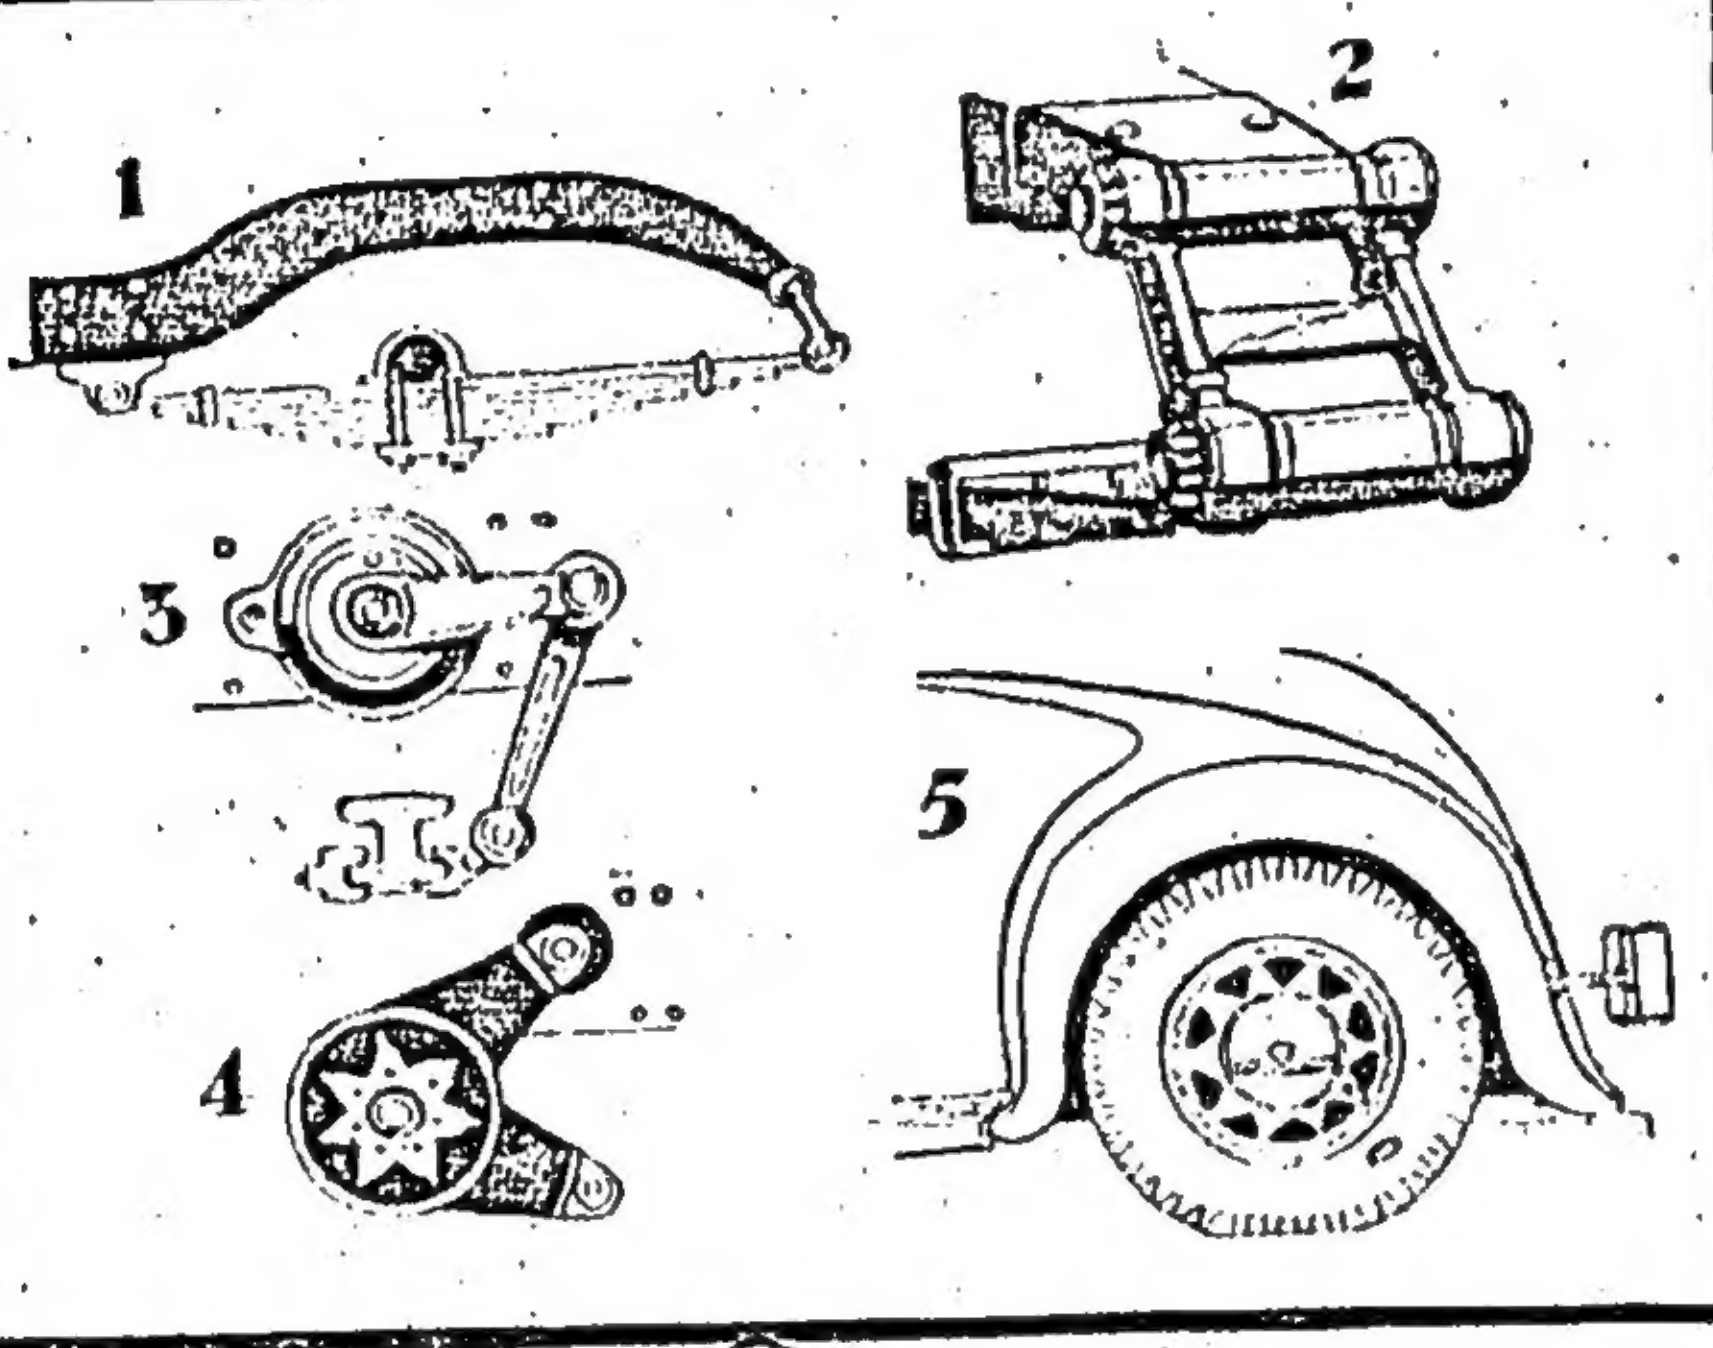

Even if it is not necessary to change gear, the same applies—brake early and accelerate. This is the principle we apply in motor racing. The man who tries to skid round corners rarely wins a race.

Does your car ride smoothly over the rough roads?

If not, check these points:

- (1) Spring leaves well lubricated.
- (2) Spring shackles packed with grease.
- (3) Hydraulic shock absorbers filled with correct amount of fluid.
- (4) Friction shock absorber plates clean and adjusted.
- (5) Correct tyre pressure all round.

"A Typical Baby's Own Tablets Child!"

Here's a face to match the sunny skies of summer, reflecting happy contentment and perfect health. Such is typical of the child whose parents rely upon Baby's Own Tablets to correct any health irregularity at the first sign, and thus keep the child in the best of condition all the year round.

For the usual ailments to which little children are subject, such as stomach upset, constipation, colic, colds and croup, feverishness, worms, there is no better remedy than Baby's Own Tablets, and they likewise are a corrective of diarrhoea by removing its cause, usually the presence of irritating matter in the intestinal tract.

At teething time, too, so often a period of pain and sleeplessness, the tablets are invaluable, as their mild laxative action settles the stomach, eases the pains, soothes the nerves, and promotes health-giving sleep.

Homes with children where Baby's Own Tablets find a permanent place, are happy homes! Get a vial to-day; all chemists sell them.

MID-WEEK PROBLEMS

PROBLEM I
CIGARS

THERE were three brands of cigars at the cigar-stall, costing respectively 2s., 1s. 6d., and 1s.

Each of Mary's uncles bought cigars there. Each of them, moreover, spent exactly £1 in the purchase of twelve cigars.

On the other hand, no two of them laid out their money in exactly the same way. This interested Mary, as also did the fact that, among them, they had exhausted every possible way of buying twelve cigars for £1.

How many cigars of each kind were bought?

PROBLEM II
MRS. ADDEM AND HER CHILDREN

MRS. ADDEM'S age is three times the sum of the ages (in years) of her children.

This ratio will, of course, decrease from year to year. In eleven years' time Mrs. Addem's age will equal the sum of the children's ages.

The age (in years) of the oldest child is equal to the product of the ages (in years) of the other two.

No two children were born in the same year. What are the children's ages?

PROBLEM III
A SQUARE IN BLOOMSBURY

BLOOMSBURY SQUARE is a tiny square in Bloomsbury. There is only one house on each of its four sides. These sides may be called the North side, East side, South side and West side respectively.

The residents in the square are Mr. East, Mr. West, Mr. North and Mr. South. They are (not necessarily respectively) a barrister, a doctor, a sculptor and an actor.

Here are some more facts about them:

The resident on the North side of the square knows nothing about the law.

The doctor lives opposite to Mr. South; and the actor, opposite to Mr. North.

The resident on the West side of the square has never passed an examination.

Mr. South, who has never been inside a theatre, has briefed the barrister in an action now pending in the Courts.

Mr. West is the actor's right-hand neighbour.

Draw a plan of Bloomsbury Square showing each resident's house and occupation.

PROBLEM IV
DAPHNE'S AGE

[See how quickly you can do this one. It ought not to take more than ten minutes.]

"It's a funny thing," said Daphne. "My mother's age is half the sum of my father's age and my age, and my father's age and my mother's age total 100, and both their ages are prime numbers."

How old is Daphne?

[A prime number is a number which has no factors other than the number itself and unity.]

PROBLEM V
A BRIDGE FOUR

Four friends made up a Bridge four: Admiral Acenough, Lord Bidmore, Colonel Clubwell and Judge Deucifer. Five rubbers were played, the scores of which were 1,100,800, 900, 400 and 1,700 points.

At the end of the evening, it transpired that the Admiral and Judge Deucifer had each won the same amount. The Judge, however, had won more rubbers than the Admiral.

Colonel Clubwell was also a winner, while Lord Bidmore lost eleven times as much as Colonel Clubwell won.

What was the result of each rubber?

MARRIAGE: BY MAN WHO WAS A WOMAN

"I Shall Have To Get Used To My New Surroundings First"

PROBLEM: Do Air Women Lack Charm?

LONDON Air Reporter writes: Study the photographs of six famous women air pilots, read my camera-interviews with some of them, read what the others have accomplished. Then decide whether Harold Gatty, American round-the-world flier, now in Australia, was right when he said (as reported in "Telegraph" recently) that women pilots are lacking in grace and charm.

JEAN BATTEN, twenty-five-year-old New Zealander, came to England to learn music. Decided to fly instead. Flew alone in fourth-hand light plane to Australia and back; broke records each way. Crossed South Atlantic alone last year. This won Britannia Trophy.

AMY MOLISON, flew to Japan six years ago by lone trip to Australia. Has since flown North Atlantic and broken England-Cape route record. Said: "I cannot help taking Mr. Gatty's remarks as a personal insult. I challenge him to any flight in my plane under any conditions HE cares to name."

DOROTHY SPICER, aged twenty-eight, air circus pilot. Since learning to fly in 1929 has taken every ground engineer's licence, feat which few men pilots can equal. Flying in her daily job. Has never troubled about long-distance records. Is now in Campbell Black's travelling air circus with Pauline Gower. Between them ran their own flying business as engineers and pilots.

JILL WYNDHAM, blonde society girl. Smashed Cape-town-London flight record with David Jewell last year. Said: "Please introduce me to this man Gatty when he comes to England. I'll show him if we are lacking in charm."

AMELIA EARHART (Mrs. Putnam), known as "Lady Lindy" bears striking resemblance to America's air hero. Has flown North Atlantic twice, once alone, once as passenger. First lone flight to cross Pacific and fly 2,000 miles non-stop. "I am married," she said, "to a publisher who persuaded her to fly Atlantic as passenger."

PAULINE GOWER, twenty-six-year-old daughter of Sir Robert Gower, M.P., is a convent girl who learned to fly when she was twenty. Within a year had qualified for highly specialised commercial pilot's "B" licence.

Dominions' £250,000 Plan to Save "All Red" Shipping Route

WILL Britain give a lead to the Empire to keep the flag flying in the Pacific shipping trade?

British shipping circles are worried at the prospect that American subsidised competition will speedily oust British lines from vitally important Imperial routes between Canada, the United States, New Zealand, and Australia, unless subsidy aid is applied.

The figure suggested is £250,000 a year, which is roughly equal to the help enjoyed by the United States concerns.

A number of Dominions representatives will be conferring in London during this month on various matters affecting inter-Imperial trade.

FULL SUPPORT
They will include Sir Edward Beatty, chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, Mr. R. G. Menzies, Attorney-General of Australia, Mr. Earle C. G. Page, the Australian Minister for Commerce, Mr. Vincent Massey, the Canadian High Commissioner and Sir J. C. Farr, High Commissioner for New Zealand.

It is believed in British shipping quarters that Canada, Australia and New Zealand would be willing to consider providing quotas of a £250,000 subsidy if the British Government would adopt such a policy.

It is understood that F.I.L. would be a financial supporter of the scheme, in the interests of maintaining the "All Red Route."

There will be consultations, it is expected, between the Empire spokesmen and the Board of Trade. In shipping quarters it is definitely thought that, if Mr. Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, could gain British Government support for a subsidy a plan would quickly be evolved.

U.S. SUBSIDY
In view of the British shipping interest the United States Government help has enabled the American Mail Line to build vessels of a character with which no private company can compete, without similar assistance.

Notice has been given of the withdrawal as from November this year of the Union Steamship Company's San Francisco line, and it is feared that unless assistance is forthcoming the Canadian Australasian Line will have to close the Pacific service between Vancouver, New Zealand, and Australia.

In this case the "All Red Route" would be cut for the first time, with unfortunate consequences to British prestige. The regular and rapid Pacific services from Australia and New Zealand would be left in foreign hands, producing an undesirable situation in the event of any emergency.

It is pointed out that British shipyards have an interest in the position, since the competition of the Matson Line requires the building of two new vessels for the British companies, at a cost of some £2,500,000.

From the shipping point of view, however, it is said that only Government subsidies could make it possible to envisage such a policy, and that assistance is necessary, in any case, to tide over the interim.

MAY RETURN THE MEDALS SHE WON

IN ATHLETIC CONTESTS

Plymouth, June 21.

MR. MARK WESTON—until a few days ago Miss Edith Marie Louise Weston, a champion British woman athlete—is trying to solve two of the strangest problems ever faced by man or woman.

Should he retain the medals he won in women's British and international championship contests?

Can he continue his former relationships with his men and women friends as though nothing had happened? Having lived for 30 years as a woman, Mr. Weston, as the result of two operations, has been certified to be a man.

IN GOOD FAITH

"I am not so much worried as to whether I shall have to return my championship awards," he said to-day in his mother's cottage at Oreston, near Plymouth.

I won them in good faith because I honestly believed at the time that I was a woman.

"But if I have to return them I shall do so without hesitation. I hope to continue my professional career, though now I shall be a masseur instead of a masseuse."

"Most of my former clients have told me they wish to continue to be treated by me."

ARM-IN-ARM

He was silent on the subjects of friendships and romance. So, too, was his particular friend of his womanhood days, Miss Mabel Bray.

They were walking arm-in-arm together when a newspaper correspondent met them.

Mr. Weston says it is much too early to think of marriage.

"I have, of course, a very great personal friend, a girl, who has been my friend for many years," he added, without glancing at Miss Bray.

"During the past few days she has been absolutely indispensable, but the question of marriage is much too sudden."

"I shall have to get used to my new surroundings before I consider such a subject."

CHANGE OF SEX Amazing Result of Two Operations

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT)

THIS is the amazing story of the well-known "woman" athlete, winner of international honours, who after 30 years as a woman has now become a man.

Up to two months ago "she" was wearing silk stockings and skirts. To-day, following two operations, "she" is wearing man's clothing. "She" has been medically certified to be of the male sex, and is faced with the problem of starting life all over again.

The athlete whose sex has changed in this extraordinary fashion is Mary Edith Louise Weston, of Oreston, near Plymouth, who in 1924 won the British women's championship for putting the shot, retained the title for six years, and in 1927 won the British women's championship for throwing the javelin.

"Mary" Weston—now Mark Weston—recently returned home after seven weeks in Charing Cross Hospital, London.

Two operations were performed—one in April, and one at the beginning of last month. As a result, Mr. Weston has received the following certificate:

"This is to certify that Mr. Mark Weston, who has always been brought up as a female, is a male, and should continue life as such—(Signed) L. R. Broster, Surgeon, (Charing Cross Hospital.)"

With one hand in the pocket of his grey flannel trousers, and the other holding a cigarette, Mr. Weston explained in an interview at his home that he was always brought up as a girl.

After leaving school at Oreston "she" worked in a tailoring factory in Plymouth. "She" then took an interest in nursing, and studied massage, travelling with the British and international women's athletic teams, visiting different European countries. "She" secured a certificate for massage, and took up private practice in Plymouth and the surrounding district.

HER FIRST DOUBTS.

"She" was a born athlete. When in "her" teens she joined the Plymouth Women's Athletic Club, and after a couple of months' training it was discovered "she" could put the shot exceedingly well. "Her" long and notable career in women's athletic championships followed.

"It was in 1928, when competing in the world games at Prague, that I began to have doubts about my sex," Mr. Weston continued.

"I did not have the nerve to see a doctor, but I realised that something was happening to me, and that I could go on no longer as a woman."

"Eventually I made up my mind to consult a London specialist, and then I was told that it would be to my advantage to undergo an operation. I consented, and two operations took place."

"I came home from hospital the

GIRL HE COULD NOT FORGET

Roosevelt's Cousin Shoots Himself

New York, June 21.

ROBERT DELANO, second cousin of President Roosevelt, left the luxury of his family life in New York more than a year ago to go to the wild interior of Argentina.

He wanted to forget a love affair with a Washington girl which ended after they had become engaged.

Last Sunday he killed himself, according to reports received in New York to-day from the frontier town of Resistencia.

Delano, twenty-eight-year-old son of Lyman Delano, wealthy New York railway magnate, left two letters, one addressed to President Roosevelt, the other to his former fiancée. Her name is a closely guarded secret.

The reports say that Delano shot himself in the head while carrying out his duties as assistant manager of an electric power plant.

He had recently attempted a reconciliation with the girl.

She Was a Blonde

Recording a case of "death" and revival in a dentist's chair, when the heart of a girl of four and a half ceased beating for three minutes, Dr. Donald Blatchley, London, writing in the British Medical Journal, comments:

"Excepting her bad teeth, this patient was in perfect health, but she was a blonde. I have observed that the cases which react badly to nitrous oxide and air, being prostrated after the administration, are invariably of the blonde type."

"I would be interested to hear whether this phenomenon has been observed by other anaesthetists."

City in 1934, when she set up a world's record for the 800 metres race.

A growing number of cases of so-called "sex reversal" have been reported in Britain in recent years.

A Fifeshire "girl" of 16 became a boy in 1934, and in 1932 an 18-year-old Manchester "girl" underwent a similar change. A Shoreham, Sussex, baby, which has been registered as a girl, was made a "boy" on medical advice a few years ago.

Last year it was reported that a 10-year-old Devon "boy" was slowly becoming a girl.

A Danish artist's change of sex from male to female was officially recognised at Copenhagen in 1931.

HUNGARIAN PARALLEL

Budapest, June 28.

A 27-year-old girl has become a 37-year-old man as a result of a change-of-sex operation at the Dobrecan clinic, Hungary.

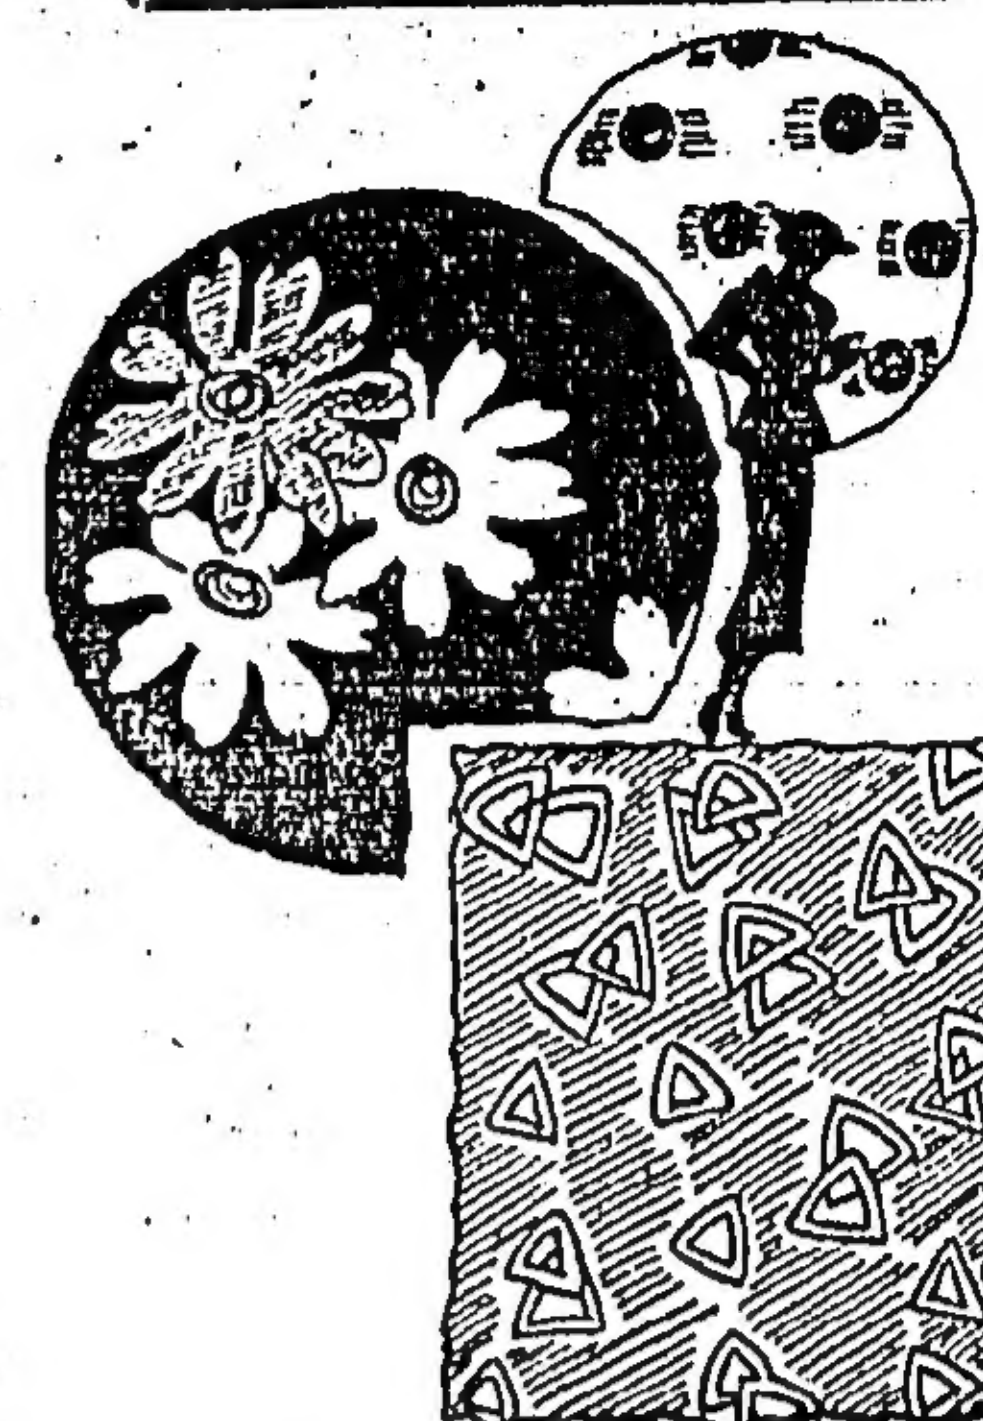

She is—or rather was—Miss Jolan Kun, who now wears men's clothes and carries a walking-stick. "She" is very proud of "her" newly-grown moustache, and "her" great ambition is to grow a beard.

"Before the operation I was 27," the new Mr. Kun said in an interview. "But now I am 37. A man need not conceal his true age."—Feature.

CINEMA NOTES

As soon as a shooting date for "Nell Gwyn" showing at the King's Theatre to-day, had been decided upon by Herbert Wilcox, Anna Neagle, starring as Nell, with Cedric Hardwicke as Charles II, was faced with the necessity of "fattening up." Miss Neagle's normal weight is eight stone two pounds but Nell Gwyn was the Mae West of Merrie England and believed in curves. It was therefore necessary for Anna Neagle to put on several pounds before playing the part. Here are some of the foodstuffs which Anna Neagle resorted to, and which she heartily recommends to those who want to put on weight rather than lose it.—Porridge and cream, eggs and lavishly buttered toast for breakfast. A half-pint of milk morning and night. Potatoes baked in their skins and eaten with butter, at least twice a day. Chocolate after lunch. As much butter as possible at tea. Always some kind of pie or pastry at dinner. As far as possible Anna Neagle kept this diet going right through the production of "Nell Gwyn" and supplemented it with an additional ration of milk every afternoon to prevent any loss of her hard-earned pounds through the exertion and nerve-strain of filming.

"The Voice of Bugle Ann"
Lionel Barrymore went on strike! He was working in a scene in "The Voice of Bugle Ann" in the episode where he comes home from prison. "You come into the bedroom," read the script clerk, "throw your hat on the bed—" "Holy Mackerel, no!" yelled the startled star. "Throw a hat on a bed—especially on Friday the thirteenth! Never!" Bad luck following throwing a hat on a bed is one of the oldest of stage superstitions. Friday the thirteenth is another. So director Richard Thorpe changed the scene and eliminated the Jinx. Maureen O'Sullivan and Eric Linden head the supporting cast in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, which comes on Tuesday to the Alhambra Theatre. Also featured are Dudley Digges, Charles Grapewin, Spring Byington and Henry Wadsworth.

"In Person," the attraction showing at the Oriental Theatre on Friday and Saturday comes from the same pen which wrote the sensational success, "It Happened One Night." The pen belongs to Samuel Hopkins Adams, popular American author. In "In Person," Adams again turns to sophisticated comedy-drama, giving Ginger Rogers an opportunity to display her heretofore little-revealed talents in that direction. The story concerns the comic and romantic entanglements which develop when an egotistical actress falls in love with a handsome young man who refuses to accept her celebrated charms as an offset to her exhausting arrogance. In his mountain cabin he disciplines her, but it is not long before he reciprocates the actress' romantic urge. "In Person," makes the debut of Ginger Rogers as a solo star.

"Personal Maid's Secret"

One of the most unique comedies that this reviewer has seen in many a long day, was shown at the Star Theatre yesterday under the title of "Personal Maid's Secret."

The talented cast is headed by Margaret Lindsay, Warren Hull, Anita Louise and Ruth Donnelly. Miss Lindsay does a clever bit of acting as the ambitious wife who has the foresight to see that judicious spending will bring them contacts with business men and socially prominent families, which in turn means financial success. Warren Hull, former musical comedy and radio star, displays great talent in his first film role as the husband. Ruth Donnelly has the role of the maid who is the real inspiration behind the rise to fortune. Miss Donnelly, although she plays a semi-comedy role to start with, is given an opportunity in this picture to show her dramatic ability. Anita Louise, as her daughter, and Frank Albertson, play the romantic roles and are an unusually pleasing pair of screen lovers. Arthur Treacher is riotously funny as a stuff-necked butler who insists on patronising the maid, although quite in love with her. Others in the cast who do excellent work are Henry O'Neill, Ronnie Cosby, Gordon Elliott, Florence Fair and Maude Turner Gordon.

NEW INDUSTRY GRINDING AUSTRALIAN WHEAT HERE

Within a comparatively short time Hongkong may have a new industry—flour milling. At present there are two Australians in the Colony who have spent the last few years looking into the matter here and it is their plan to return to Australia, rather than capital and return to commence importing Australian wheat and milling it in works which they will construct here.

Mr. W. R. Watkins, the financial expert of the pair, and Mr. E. C. Julian, an authority on wheat and flour, have spent months studying conditions here, visiting mills already in existence in China and Japan, and they have come to the conclusion that there would be an immense market in Hongkong, South China, Manila and possibly the Malay Peninsula for flour milled in the Colony.

At present Hongkong imports from Australia no less than 1,007,839 piculs of flour annually, of a total value of almost five million dollars. Manila imports considerably more than this amount annually from Australia.

Pointing out some of the advantages to be gained by milling the wheat here rather than in Australia, Mr. Watkins said yesterday to a Press representative that several sites were already under consideration for the erection of the mill and each was favourably placed from the point of view of unloading the wheat from ships and for forwarding it in the form of flour.

Other Products

The erection of the plant and buildings would cost only a fraction as much in Hongkong as it would in Sydney, while machinery brought from England or America to Hongkong would avoid the immense duty which is imposed on such material entering Australian ports. The labour in the completed mill, in the same way, would be very little compared to the wages which must be paid in Australia where the minimum wage is over three pounds a week.

Australian capital to back the venture is not lacking and when Mr. Watkins and Mr. Julian leave the Colony at the end of this week and return to Sydney via Manila (where they will stop off for a short period) they will have the proposal at quite an advanced stage. They will both be returning in the winter months with concrete plans for the erection of the mill and the commencement of milling of Australian wheat here.

Besides milling the flour the mill will also be able to produce many subsidiary lines such as breakfast foods which at present have to come from America or Australia in a form extremely bulky and perishable.

Mr. Watkins and Mr. Julian have already placed a number of Australian products on the market here and are taking back with them a number of Chinese products to place on the Australian market.

Saw Rennie's Machinery
"We plan," said Mr. Watkins yesterday, "to form a trading company the aim of which will be reciprocal trade. Australia is confined to export primary products almost without exception, while we can profitably import from China only manufactured goods. We have found that in the last few years Chinese goods have increased very much in quality and many lines which we looked at in Japan we found were produced more cheaply and were of a better quality in China."

While in Japan Mr. Watkins spent a lot of time inspecting flour mills, and by a strange coincidence found the mill which was using the machinery originally installed in Rennie's mill—the last venture of this sort which was undertaken in Hongkong. The Australian pair have thoroughly investigated the venture of Rennie, who many years ago built a large mill to grind wheat in Hongkong, but failed. His failure, they state, was due to over speculation and his inability to buy wheat at a world parity price. He bought mainly from America. To-day wheat all over the world costs practically the same to all millers, and in Hongkong the Australian wheat would have a slight advantage owing to freight rates, while the cost of milling here would be considerably less than almost anywhere in the world.

WOMAN'S DEATH VERDICT OF SUICIDE AT INQUEST

An inquiry into the death of a woman named Wong Luk, aged 30, who was found hanging in an unhampered but at Shek Kip Mei village on June 10, was conducted by Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen, sitting as Coroner, at the Kowloon Magistrate's court yesterday afternoon.

The jury empanelled to assist the Coroner comprised Messrs. B. H. Nyhoff (Foreman), W. L. Butt, Jnr., and L. E. Rosario.

Detective-Sergeant J. M. Forrest was in charge of the inquiry. Dr. G. H. Henry, Medical Officer in charge of the Kowloon Public Mortuary, deposed that he conducted a post mortem examination on the body of a female aged about 30 at 9 a.m. on June 11. The body was identified as that of Wong Luk b. Lau Chuen and Li Shek-lui in the presence of Sergeant Forrest. The cause of death was asphyxiation due to hanging. Death had taken place about the previous day. There were no other signs of violence. Deceased had been suffering from pneumonia.

Replying to the Coroner, witness said that pneumonia might cause persons to have delirium and mental derangement. The discovery of the tragedy was then related by Li Shek-lui, mother-in-law of deceased, aged 60. She stated that she resided at an unnumbered hut at Shek Kip Mei with her husband, her son, her daughter-in-law, and their five months old child. Their relation with each other was good.

Before deceased died, she had been rather short-tempered and this was unusual. Deceased also took little food, and appeared irritated. On the morning of June 10, deceased had left the hut to go to Tsing-tsu, and had returned about 6 p.m. After their evening meal, witness's son went out and the rest of the household retired.

A Child's Distress
Witness was awakened about 10 p.m. by the crying of the baby boy, who was about a year and a half old. Witness called to the child's mother, but received no reply. She then took the child along towards deceased's cubicle, and outside it she gave another call. On receiving no reply, witness pushed open the sliding door and found her daughter-in-law hanging in the room. A rope was tied around her neck, and the other end was tied to a rafter. Deceased's feet were about four inches from the floor.

Witness placed the child she was carrying on a bed in the front cubicle and hastened back to the room. She tried to untie the knot around deceased's neck, and after some difficulty, she succeeded in doing so. She gave a call and her husband came to her assistance with some Chinese medicine. A little later, witness's son returned home, and he went with witness to report the matter at the Shamshuipo Police Station. Witness could give no reason for deceased having done away with herself, and could only say she committed suicide.

Lau Chuen, husband of deceased, and a watchman employed at the Children's Playground, Tsing-tsu, said that he had good terms with his wife. For a month or so before her death, she had appeared to be irritable and angry for periods of three or four days at intervals. Before witness left the house that night, deceased had complained of a headache.

The father-in-law of deceased, Lau On, also gave evidence, after which Sergeant Forrest deposed to proceeding to the scene and finding the body. The Coroner said the jury should have no difficulty in returning, on the medical evidence, a cause of death, as asphyxiation due to hanging, and that deceased hanged herself. The fact that she suffered from pneumonia prior to her death was also a cause of her death.

The jury agreed unanimously with the Coroner, and joined with him in expressing their sympathy to the family of deceased.

'WARE WHITE ANTS' EXPERT GIVES EVIDENCE ON GRAVE MENACE

Hongkong Rotarians were regaled to a treatise on the greatest menace to human life and property at their weekly luncheon yesterday, when Mr. T. Cowan addressed them on the subject of the White Ant.

The speaker said the cockroach was the filthiest insect which contaminated food while the depredations of the white ant were one of the gravest menaces to the safety of buildings.

At the opening of the session the President, Mr. W. N. Thomas Tam, welcomed Rotarian T. B. Wilson on his return from long leave. Rotarian Wilson, warmly acclaimed by those present, said he was glad to return. Since he left six months ago he had been running foul of Rotarians continually in his travels (Laughter). He had visited many clubs and at Seattle he was presented with a totem pole souvenir as the visiting member from the most distant club. Though he knew little about totem poles he recognised so many familiar faces in its carvings that he felt quite homesick. (Laughter).

He congratulated the Club on its new officers and looked forward to the continued activities of the Club under the new President.

The President welcomed the following guests: Mr. E. B. Cromwell, West Point, Mississippi; Messrs. M. Symon, W. A. Butterfield, W. L. McKenzie, and J. D. Danby, Hongkong.

The speaker, Mr. T. Cowan, said he had had great experience in dealing with white ants in Australia; but when he came here he thought he was in the Garden of Eden—so much of the fruit had already been eaten. The ants were supposed to work only in the summer and to confine their activities to the roofs of houses. In his research here on 60 houses he found that they not only attacked the body of houses, floors, etc., but also worked in the winter though not to such a great extent.

Capitalist Ant
Specimens of the ants were passed round by the speaker for examination and from a sketch he illustrated the founding and growth of a colony. Each swarm of ants contained about three fertile queens and these were taken care of by fertilising ants known as the soldier ants. It was the soldier ant who made the initial entry in which the queen laid her 60,000 eggs each day and he superintended the storage of excreta and the work of the "nurses" who looked after the little ants in their early stages.

Another class of ants in each colony were known as the workers and it was their job to go out each day to the well-worn cavities and to bring back a portion of wood extract to bring back to the colony as food. The home was kept at a constant temperature of 80 degrees by the fungus-like excreta and the queen continued to lay her eggs while the soldier ant, like some insect capitalist, continued the well-running of the home, spurred the workers on to their tasks and looked after important questions of defence.

If a channel was broken and the stream of ants became confused it was the soldier ant who showed them the circuit round the obstruction; if attack threatened, he signalled by thumps on the floor to the workers to make suitable preparations. In reply to questions the speaker said the dying ant of Hongkong was certainly related to the white ant. What happened was that male members of a colony would occasionally swarm and fly blindly round until by chance they contacted with a queen ant. In that case they founded a colony with her but if they did not make contact they died within a few hours. The fact that, though blind, they were attracted by a light was a matter of instinct, but a householder seeing millions of these white ants in his house on any particular evening need not think that the ants had come to stay. If there was no queen ant in the vicinity the whole lot would die before morning.

Rotarian W. A. Cromwell thanked the speaker for his address and assured him that if he could do anything to alleviate the problems which these insects presented in Hongkong his fortune was undoubtedly made.

new schemes for help were submitted by Colonial Governments and £730,860 actually issued.

Aid had been given in a great variety of needs, including inter alia the construction of roads, bridges, hospitals, factories, the provision of water supplies and research into tropical problems, ranging from cold storage for bananas, to ravages of mealy bug in coffee crops.—British Wireless.

RANDALL GETS TWO YEARS

TWO CHINESE ALSO GAOLED

Denouncing the conspiracy as one of the most abominable crimes which could happen in the Colony, His Honour Sir Atholl MacGregor, Chief Justice, at the Criminal Sessions yesterday passed sentence on three men found guilty of attempting to bribe Revenue Officers to refrain from interfering with opium traffic.

On behalf of Randall, Mr. Sheldon said he had already pleaded guilty on the second charge, the giving of the bribe, and he did not intend to address his Lordship and the jury further.

In a short address to the jury, Mr. Williams emphasised that the Crown case was that the first accused was the person who originated the conspiracy. He said there was no question of a trap being set by the Revenue Officers because the suggestion of the money came originally from the accused.

In his summing-up to the jury, his Lordship reviewed the evidence given both for the Crown and the defence.

Verdict of Guilty

After considering their verdict for 20 minutes, the jury returned an unanimous verdict against all three defendants.

Mr. Sheldon, interposing before sentence was passed, referred to the speech of the Assistant Attorney General in which he said the information as to opium duties in the Colony given to the authorities by Randall was not a matter for the jury but for consideration in passing sentence. Randall had said that he was obtaining this information for the Treasury Department of the United States and this was corroborated by two witnesses, and possibly by Mr. Campbell who had sent certain of the evidence to his Government. Counsel submitted that Randall should be given the benefit of the doubt that his object was not to make money out of opium but out of his business as an informer.

His Lordship said his difficulty was to see how it could profit anyone of the U.S. Treasury Department, the accused, or anyone else that a state of things should be brought about whereby the Chinese members of the Revenue Department were in receipt of bribes from, and were under the thumbs of persons in the self-avowed position, say of Leung Yau, anxious to engage in traffic of dangerous drugs which would be extremely difficult if he had not the aid of Revenue officers.

Mr. Sheldon said he agreed that his client's actions were foolish but there was evidence that he wished to pass on information as to what drugs were being shipped to the United States.

His Lordship: That information is a matter for the U.S. Treasury.

Judge's Comment

In passing sentence, his Lordship said, "It is not often in a Criminal Court such as this that such a diabolical plot is brought to light and satisfactorily prosecuted to conviction. Though I have listened to Mr. Sheldon and attached due weight to what he has said, I think it is my duty to say on behalf of Randall, I should be lacking in my duty to the public if I did not signalise my sense of the gravity of this case by passing on him a sentence commensurate with the abominable nature of the conspiracy. I find it difficult to imagine anything, because not only was the primary object to seduce from their allegiance to the public service, not one or two, but many respectable and responsible public officials; but I cannot overlook the fact that the inevitable consequences of the first part of the conspiracy would have been that this Colony would have been flooded with soul-destroying drugs. I would like before passing sentence to express my very high appreciation of the conduct not only of Chief Chinese R.O. Mo Kan and R.O. Tam Wei, who gave evidence, but of all the Revenue Officers, who had anything whatsoever to do with this case. It is a matter of great congratulation that the result of their training and conscientious feeling was so strong as to prevent them being drawn by such a large sum from the real service they are doing to the public."

"Randall, I have to sentence you on two counts. Perhaps fortunately for you I can only regard them as two angles of the same offence, so the sentences will run concurrently. You will go to prison for two years with hard labour on each count, the sentences to run concurrently."

"Li Yick: It may only be a fortunate accident for you that you have not appeared guilty so blatantly in these dreadful transactions and I hope that the sentence of 18 months' hard labour, which I am passing, will be a lesson to you."

"Leung Yau: I cannot find anything to say for you. You will go to

SALVATION ARMY INSTALLATION CEREMONY HELD AT PENIEL MISSION

A second installation ceremony took place last night when at the Peniel Mission, Yau-mat, Colonel V. E. Rolfe and Brigadier William Darby were introduced as the new Salvation Army Territorial Commander of South China and the General Secretary of South China respectively. The officers had already been introduced at the Chinese Methodist Church at Hennessy Road on Monday night.

During the afternoon Commissioner Bonwell, Territorial Commander of North China, Colonel Rolfe and Brig. Darby were received by H. E. The Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, at Government House.

The evening ceremony took the form of an address by Commissioner Bonwell, the full programme being: Hymn (What can Wash Away My Sin?) led by Adjutant Ponting, a prayer led by Pastor Reiton, a second hymn (Come to the Saviour) led by Captain Stanley.

Commissioner Bonwell then introduced the two new South China leaders to the congregation, and a song was sung by the officers from overseas who are visiting Hongkong for the installation ceremonies. A testimonial meeting was then held led by Brig. Darby, after which Com-

HOME POLITICS

The recent resignation of Mr. J. H. Thomas from Parliament and from his post as Secretary of State for the Colonies has caused a further diminution of the "National" status of the Government, since his place has been taken by Mr. W. G. A. Ormsby-Gore, a Conservative. There was an expectation that Mr. Baldwin would find another National Labourite to fill the vacant seat, but it would seem that the Premier's Conservative followers, who have been pressing for drastic reconstruction of the Cabinet, have induced him to give way on the point. Quite recently, the Times confessed the "National" Government facade was "beginning to wear a little thin," and it has since lost a further coating of its veneer as the result of the substitution of Mr. Thomas by a Minister of decidedly Conservative views. In some quarters it has been urged that Mr. Baldwin should, out of a realisation of the fitness of things, drop the pretence of leading a "National" Government and be honest enough to admit that his Administration is not and never has been anything else but a Conservative Government. Certainly the "Simonite" Liberals are Conservatives in everything but name, while the National Labour camp followers are a mere handful who have retained their seats by Conservative support and whose leader had to seek refuge in a safe Conservative seat after being defeated in an industrial constituency. The Prime Minister cannot, of course, have any illusions about the "National" pretence, but, having won the election on that basis, he cannot automatically change the label. The time to have done that was at the General Election. Meanwhile, the expected retirement of Mr. Baldwin, after the Whitsun Recess, has not eventuated, although there are grounds for thinking that it will not be long delayed. A few weeks back, the Times remarked that "there was a good deal of sympathy with the wit who pointed the contrast between the Japanese, imagining their Premier to be murdered till in the course of time he was turned up alive, and the English, supposing that they had a Prime Minister till it was discovered after some weeks that he had really been dead all the time," adding that "even Mr. Baldwin's most devoted admirers were driven to admit that his silence at LAST month Professor Freud, of Vienna, was eighty years of age.

He is the man who discovered psycho-analysis, the science of the study of the mind.

He has given us, directly and indirectly, phrases such as "inferiority complex," "unconscious mind," "wish fulfillment," such words as "inhibitions" and "repressions."

Here is a questionnaire based on the findings of psychological analysis, specially designed to give a key to character and prospects of happiness provided you are completely honest in your answers.

It has been set by a practising psychiatrist, who will in a further article to be published shortly give a key to the whole thing. Cut out this page and write down your answers, or at least remember them for comparison, so that you will have clues to a working basis for making the best of yourself and your life.

In situations that have not occurred to you, try to feel yourself into the situation to get the appropriate answer.

In questions where there is a single choice, put the figure 1 enclosed in a circle opposite your choice, and score through the others. Where there is a second and third choice, put the appropriate figure 2 or 3 in a circle opposite your choices and score through the others.

1. You arrive late at an entertainment, or a lecture, and you find people standing at the back. There are seats in the front which can be secured if you do not mind seeming conspicuous. Do you take the front seats:—
usually?
occasionally?
never?

2. At a play, at the movies, at a crowd, or at a cricket match, have you deliberately made remarks intended to be witty, encouraging, or disparaging in a voice that could be heard clearly by those around you:—
often?
occasionally?
never?

3. At a reception, tea or other social function, do you try to meet the most important person present:—
usually?
occasionally?
never?

4. When you are depressed or in trouble, would you rather:—
(a) be alone?
(b) read a book?
(c) go to the movies or a play?
(d) hear good music?
(e) put jazz on the gramophone?

certain critical moments had given some excuse for this morbid myth." This comment reflects, to some extent, the fairly prevalent demand amongst a certain section of the Conservative Party for a change of leadership, although again and again Mr. Baldwin has managed to overcome revolts within his party. That he has rendered splendid service to his nation is undisputed, but there is a feeling that, having borne the brunt of the battle so long, and now naturally showing signs of tiring, he should hand over the reins of office to a younger man. The change may soon come, but when it does there will be no two opinions, except amongst extremist elements, that Mr. Baldwin has proved himself a great asset to the nation during times of almost unexampled stress and strain.

OLD CITY LANDMARKS TO GO

Telegraph Special Representative

IN the course of the next ten days demolition of two familiar landmarks in the City will be started.

The remains of the old City Hall, for a short time the temporary home of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, have been turned over to the cleaners, although not completely. Bank House, at St. John's Place, is to undergo a similar experience, but in this case the building will be entirely razed.

The southern part of the City Hall will be left standing and, temporarily at least, this section will house the City Library and one of the central Sanitary Departments on the ground floor when the necessary repairs and improvements have been effected.

The first floor will be taken up with the Chater Collection of pictures, which will be locked up and will not be open to public view. It is understood that to put the collection on view, with the necessary guards, extra employees and appropriate setting would entail considerable expense, and it is this reason which has prompted Government to retain the southern section of the City Hall for the library.

An enquiry was made recently as to when the City would be better accommodated in this respect and the reply was that no financial provision could yet be made for a better library.

Opposite the City Hall is the site of the old Beaconsfield Arcade, a vacant area which the Government would be glad to dispose of, it is understood.

Bank House is another building with a long history, but of late years it has fallen into neglect. Formerly the residence of Managers of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, it boasts of capacious grounds opposite the lower Peak Tram Station. It is doubtful whether anything will be done with the property for some time after the house has been demolished but it is fairly certain that Government will take advantage of this opportunity of widening the road at this point.

ANCIENT BUILDING

The old City Hall, a portion of which is still to be retained, was completed on June 28, 1889, and was opened in November of that year by Prince Alfred, Duke of Edinburgh. It continued in existence, in its original form, until the greater part of the site was purchased by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, for its new building, when it was, save for the part still standing, demolished.

It was built by public subscription on land granted by the Government, the idea of providing a civic centre having originated at a meeting held in the Hongkong Club in 1881. The foundation stone was laid in 1887 by Sir Richard Macdonnell, the then Governor.

The Theatre Royal portion of the building was "christened" on November 3, 1889, when the first performance was given there by the Amateur Dramatic Corps (as the A.D.C. was then known) and members of the German Club Concordia. A reference to a Library and Museum (then a mere nucleus) was made in the report of a meeting held in 1870.

In front of the City Hall there used to be a rather striking fountain, which was given to the "people of Hongkong" by Mr. John Dent, a merchant, the head of a now defunct firm bearing his name. This fountain was demolished at the time of the pulling down of the major portion of the City Hall to make room for the Bank's new premises, and has not been re-erected elsewhere.

Air Raiders Could Choke Hongkong In 3 Hours

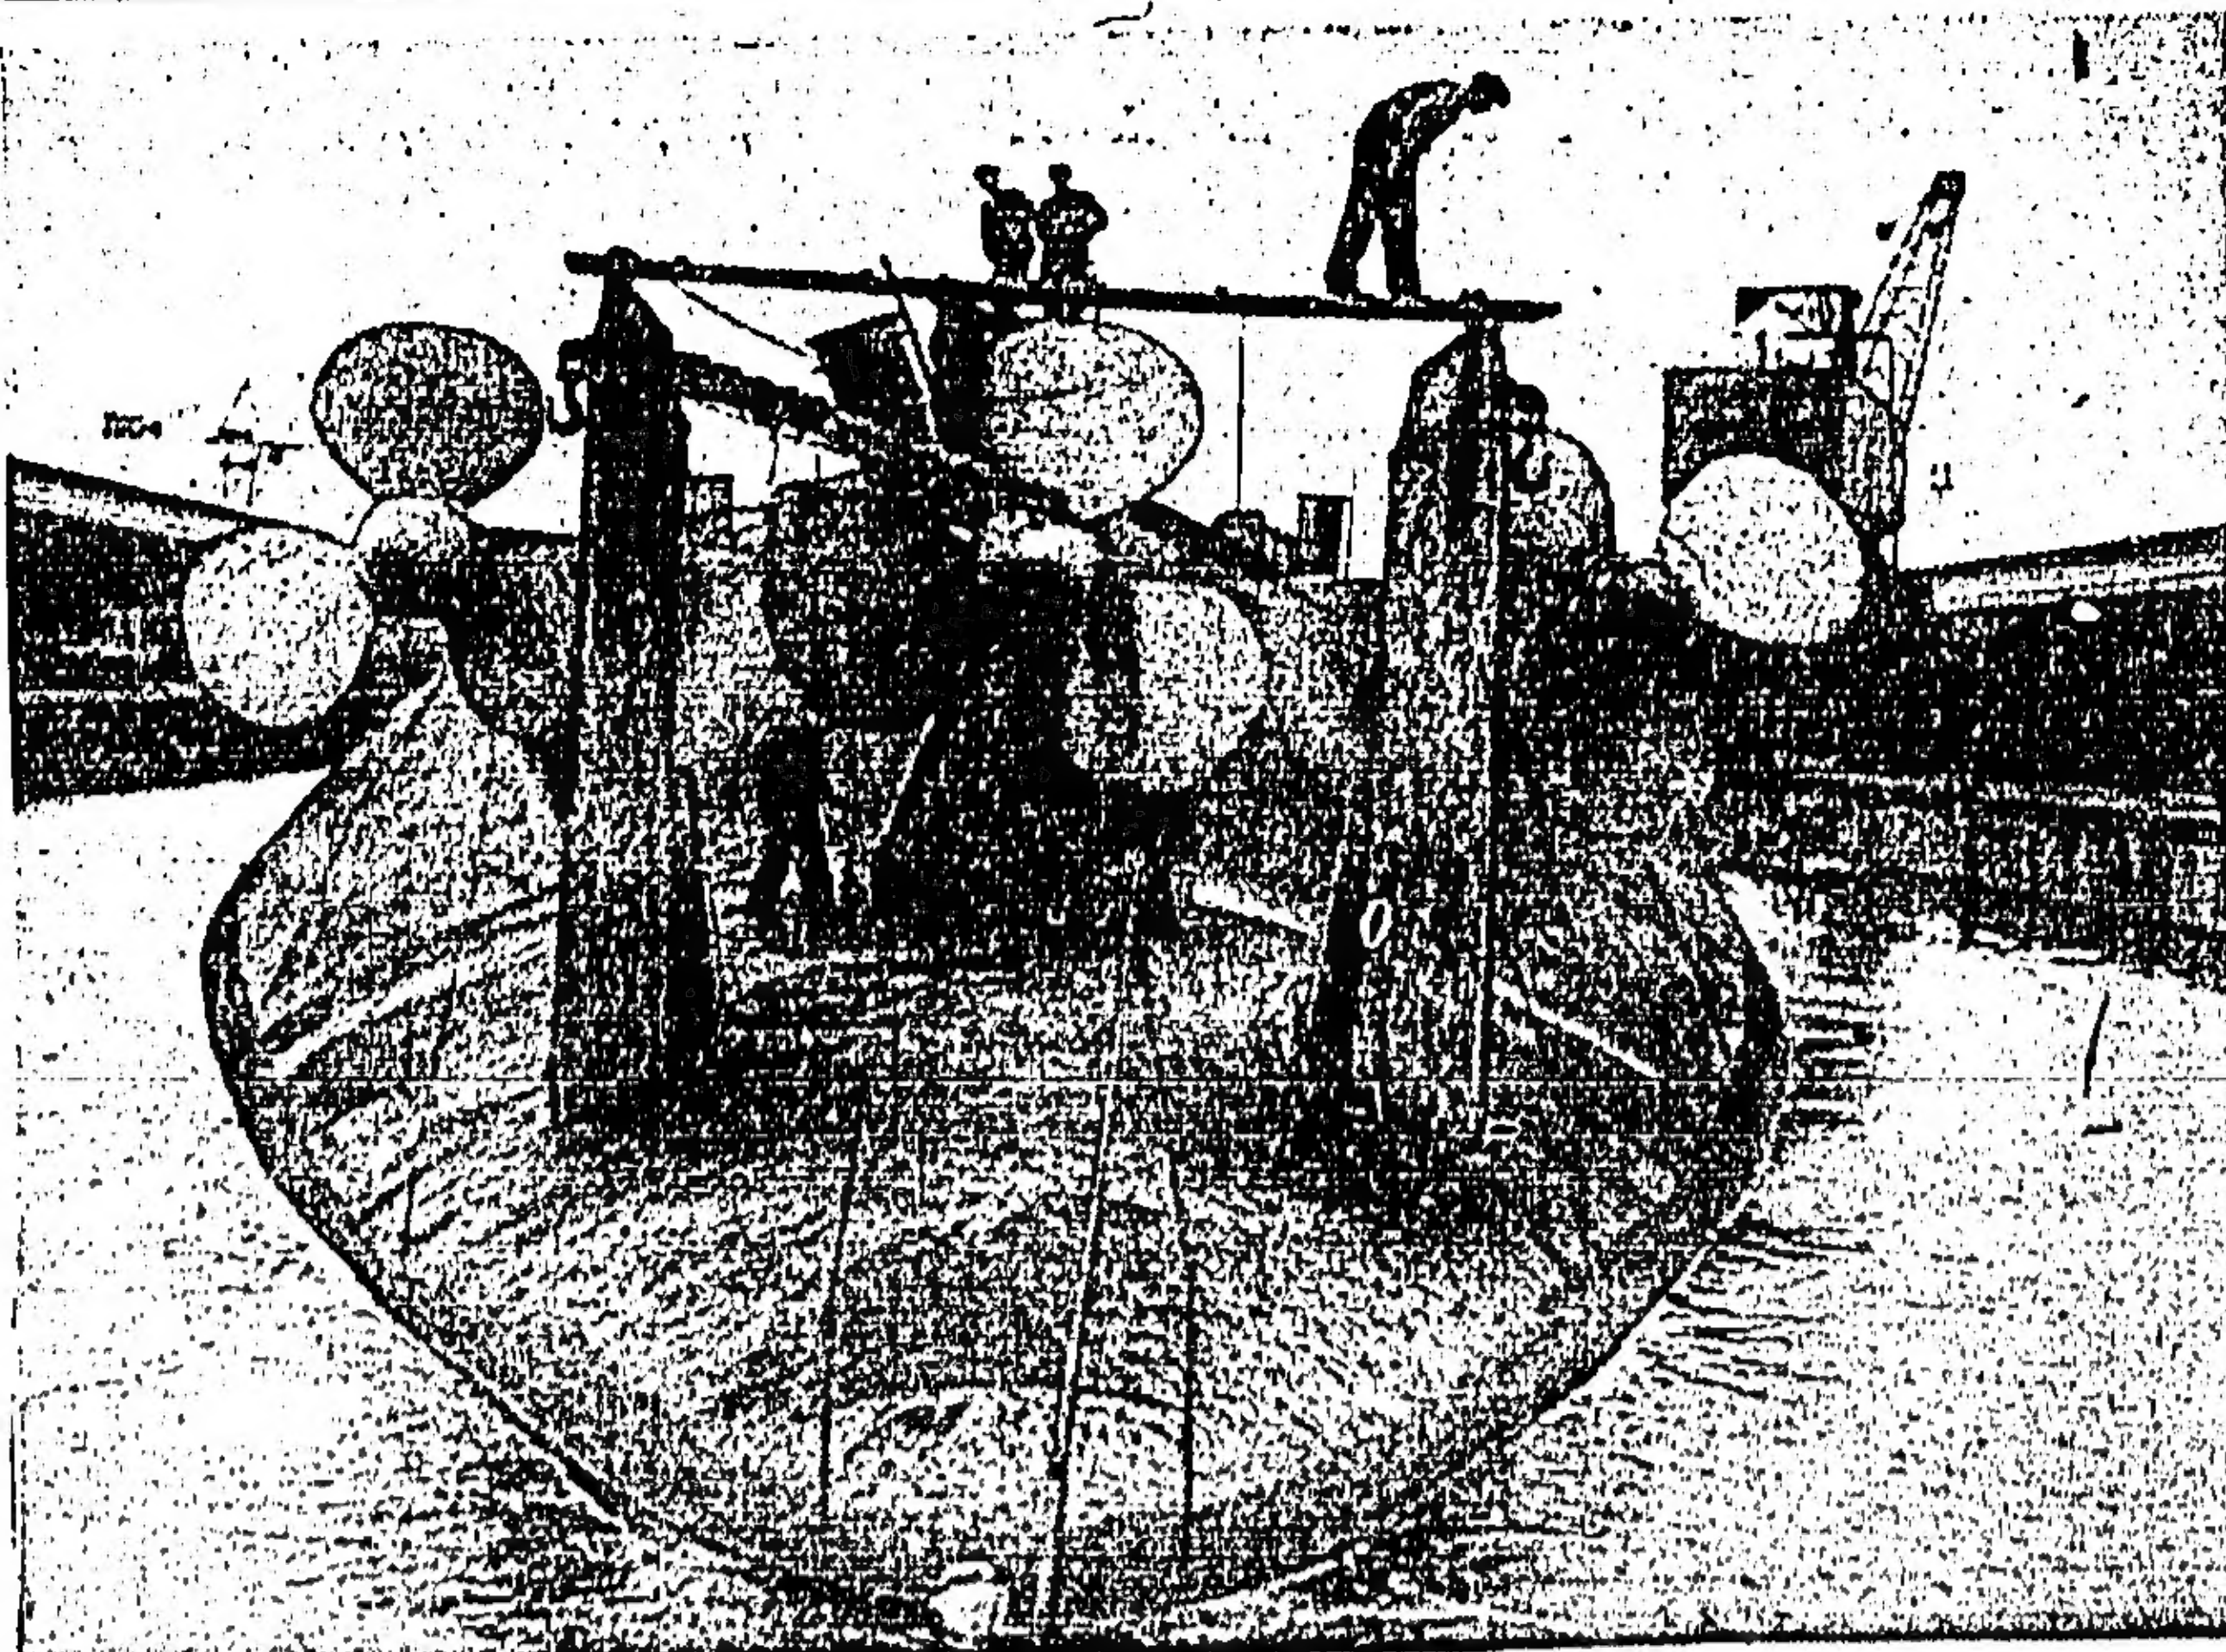

Air raid peril to big cities was emphasised by Firemaster Peter Methven, of Edinburgh, in his presidential address at the Professional Fire Brigades' Association conference in Edinburgh this month.

He said: "With a certain gas, the entire population of cities such as London, Edinburgh, and Sydney could be choked to death in three hours."

"Fire brigades would be powerless against organised air raids. Their only duties would be the saving of life and extinction of fire."

"Pandemonium produced by air bombing requires a co-ordination of forces and economy of effort, which can only come from centralisation."

"This requires firmer steps by the Government, with committees for fire, police, and medical work. The Government should also see that an adequate water supply is available."

The battleship Koenig Albert, once the pride of the German Navy was scuttled by her crew at Scapa Flow in 1918. She is now lying upside down in Rosyth Dockyard, Scotland, where workmen are scrapping her.

Singapore Robs Us of A Record

WE CAN'T BOAST NOW ABOUT SUMMER

FOR years Hongkong people have been able to sniff contemptuously when weather is mentioned by an "outsider".

A sort of gloomy pride has, in the past, attached itself to the long-cherished belief that, when it comes to humidity or heat, there's not another place in the Far East that can touch us.

Shanghai may have the longest bar, or the most beautiful bivy of cabaret girls, and Singapore may be the place where they invent gin-slings. Manila has always been the home of American freedom and didn't Macao win the coveted right to be called the Oriental terminus for the forthcoming trans-Pacific air service?

Taking it all in all, Hongkong hasn't many things to boast about compared with other civic centres in the East. Except, of course, the weather.

Now even the honour of having the hottest, most humid, sweltering and ghastly climate is denied us.

Singapore has stepped in with counter claims.

Humidity? In 1931 the Singapore average was 81. Hongkong was two per cent lower. In 1932, Singapore's average was 80; Hongkong's only 77. In 1933, Singapore boasted a mean annual

25 Cents

A Year To—

Regulate Size Of Families

Washington, June 28.

MRS. MARGARET SANGER has returned from a tour of Hongkong and China, with a new formula for regulating the size of families for 25 cents a year.

Mrs. Sanger hopes the formula eventually will be the answer to present bans against dissemination of birth control information.

It may also, she said, be "the answer to the social workers' prayers, and to refusal of the American Medical Association to help change the laws."

The chemical formula—which she did not reveal—was tested by Florida physicians for a year with good results. In China and India, she said, clinics tried it on a larger scale and found it efficacious.

The formula will not be made public, she said, until it is further tested. A year's supply for one married couple would cost only about 25 or 30 cents. It has a rice starch base, she revealed.

"I have tried for 20 years to corral people into their doctors' offices to learn about birth control because I have always believed that birth control is individual and that each woman should consult her physician on her own needs," Mrs. Sanger said.

She criticised the A.M.A. medical committee for going into economics to say there "is no evidence available to justify the broad claim that dissemination of contraceptive information will improve the economic status of the lower income groups."—United Press.

average of 84.4 and we could reach only 78 per cent.

Temperature? Our yearly average is way behind Singapore's. In 1931 Singapore's average was 88, while Hongkong averaged only 76.9 degrees. In 1932 Singapore averaged 86.8 and Hongkong 76.8, exactly ten degrees lower. In 1933 Singapore averaged 87.2 and Hongkong 78 degrees.

As a sop to our pride we can justly claim that in at least two months of the year—August and September—our mercury and humidity soars above anything Singapore can produce. Averages for the three years for which statistics are available show that the maximum average for August was 91.36 in Hongkong and 88.1 in Singapore; and for September 88.6 in Hongkong and 87.1 in Singapore.

Sometimes, too, our humidity is above Singapore's, notably for five months in 1931, six months in 1932, but for only two months in 1933.

This is how the average maximum temperatures in Singapore and Hongkong compared for the summer months of 1933:

	Singapore	Hongkong
April	87.9	77.3
May	88.7	84.0
June	89.0	87.0
July	88.1	87.9
August	88.0	89.5
September	87.0	87.1
October	80.5	82.3

And as for humidity!

	Singapore	Hongkong
April	85.1	82
May	84.2	82
June	81.4	83
July	82.3	83
August	83.2	79
September	81.9	79

Even Singapore nights are hotter than ours. For instance, the average minimum temperature in the southern city was 75.1 in 1931, 73.9 in 1932 and 73.7 in 1933, while we could boast only 69, 68.8 and 69 respectively in the same years.

During the summer months, Singapore is often hotter at night, as these statistics disclose:

	Singapore	Hongkong
June 1931	74.6	75.4
July 1931	74.1	75.2
August 1931	74.9	75.5
Sept. 1931	74.4	75.8

On the other hand, it may give us some satisfaction to know that, although we haven't the coldest climate in the Far East, we can knock Singapore sky high when it comes to the other extreme from summer's heat.

Our winters are much cooler than those in Raffles' old home town. Statistics show that while Singapore is eating its Christmas pudding in a temperature of anything from 84 to 87 degrees, Hongkong can quite easily be freezing with a temperature as low as 40.3 degrees (registered in 1931).

During winter, Hongkong's temperature is quite often more than 30 degrees below Singapore's, as figures for the months of December and January, 1931—1933, disclose:

	Average Minimum Temperatures	Singapore	Hongkong
Dec. 1931	33.3	41.7
Dec. 1932	32.8	47.0
Dec. 1933	31.5	41.4
Jan. 1931	33.8	40.3
Jan. 1932	31.9	43.3
Jan. 1933	32.5	51.5

CORRESPONDENCE

Tents on Repulse Bay Beach

(To the Editor, H. K. Telegraph.)

Sir,—Is it not ironical that just as we read in the English papers of the magnificent response of the late King's "great family" to the appeal for a Memorial Fund to provide fresh air, sunlight, and opportunities for physical development and recreation for the children of Britain, this small British Colony should read in its own papers of the passing of a measure which will effectively deprive the children of the average man of all nationalities of the only healthy and pleasurable recreation available for them in this climate?

May I through your paper appeal to every reader to think this over and decide whether he or she really wants this to happen? Perhaps many of us do not realise that with the prohibition of tents at Repulse Bay there is actually nowhere for the average man and his family to go for a swim and a picnic in shade and quiet in a Colony whose really boast is the incomparable opportunity it affords to residents and visitors for bathing. The Tourist Bureau may find it hard to convince the tourist of the truth of our assertion that the bathing is perfect here. There will be nowhere for him to try unless he is a rich man.

Mr. B. BARKER.

ENGLAND'S GLOOMY DAY AT WIMBLEDON

OUT OF WOMEN'S SINGLES

Sperling v. Jacobs Final Likely

June 30, 1936 will go down in the Wimbledon annals as "Gloomy Tuesday" for the British Empire. And this is why:

Miss Dorothy Round, popularly expected to regain the women's singles title, was beaten by Mme. H. Sperling.

Miss Katherine Stammers, England's equal No. 1 ranking player, lost to Miss Jedrejowska of Poland.

Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist of Australia, holders of the men's doubles championship, were beaten by Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon of France.

H. G. N. Cooper and H. K. Tinkler, a foremost English pair fell victims to the Japan-American combination of Itoh and Cunningham.

Not all of these results were surprising. The defeat of Crawford and Quist is well high deserving to be ranked as sensational, while the elimination of Dorothy Round was a distinct upset.

But the defeat of Kay Stammers was always possible, if not probable.

NO REPRESENTATIVE LEFT

The net result is that England has no representative left in the women's singles, while Hughes and Tuckey are now the only combination capable of stopping the men's doubles title from going either to France or America.

The semi-finalists in the women's singles are:

Miss Helen Jacobs (America).

Miss Jedrejowska (Poland).

Mme. H. Sperling (Denmark).

Mme. Mathieu (France).

and they will meet on Thursday as follows:

Miss Jacobs v. Miss Jedrejowska.

Mme. Sperling v. Mme. Mathieu.

MME. SPERLING'S CHANCE

Nothing is certain at Wimbledon; nevertheless there appears to be fairly long odds that Miss Jacobs and Mme. Sperling will meet again after a fairly lengthy interval. One of their earliest matches was in 1931 when Mme. Sperling (or P. Krahwinkel as she was then) beat Helen Jacobs in the Wimbledon semi-final 10-8, 6-4, 6-4, afterwards going down to defeat in the final at the hands of P. Cicely Aussen, her countrywoman.

Two years later Mme. Sperling again figured in the Wimbledon semi-final beating Miss Peggy Scriven but losing to Mrs. Helen Williams-Moody.

In 1934 she was out in the third round by Joan Hartigan of Australia, but last year again reached the last four, losing to Miss Jacobs 6-3, 6-0.

Mme. Mathieu is another player who has figured consistently in the semi-finals during the last six years. It so happened that in 1930, 1931, 1932 and again in 1934. But she has never contested a final. If she and Mme. Jedrejowska should win to-morrow Wimbledon will see entirely new finalists.

DOROTHY BREAKS A SHOULDER STRAP

Incident On Court

London, June 30.

A broken shoulder strap is attributed by United Press as being a very decisive factor in the remarkable defeat to-day of Miss Dorothy Round, England's chief hope for the women's title at Wimbledon.

With Mme. Sperling leading three-love in the second set (having won the first at 6-3) Miss Round broke a shoulder strap.

She fixed things up with a strap borrowed from a spectator, but this immediately broke.

Miss Round then asked permission to retire to the clubhouse for "repairs," but Mme. Sperling refused to accede to the request.

Miss Round was clearly nettled, but she rallied fiercely to win three games in a row and to draw level at three-all.

But the effort cost her a lot and she tired quickly after this, serving a double fault at match point.

England's hopes of winning the women's title were finally blasted, says United Press, when Mme. Jedrejowska of Poland defeated Miss Stammers with surprising ease.

Miss Helen Jacobs had the fight of her life to beat the Chilean champion, Senorita Anita Lizana over three sets.

Miss Jacobs continued to play variable tennis and is still off form.

Nevertheless there is a record number of entries which total 121.

The title of the meeting is the Grand Challenge Cup event in which the Japanese Olympic crew and the Zurich threaten Britain's leading clubs.

The Japanese, who have been stroking higher than anything seen previously in England, will start warm favourites.

There is also a strong foreign entry for the Diamond Sculls including three Americans, three Canadians, and one Brazilian.

The three American crews, Browne and Nichols, Kent School and Tabor Academy are the big threat to British crews for the Thames Challenge Cup.

The Swiss pair and four are likely to complete the double in winning the Goblets and Stewards' Cup respectively.—Router.

GONSALVES AND REMEDIOS SHINE FOR THE RECREIO IN TENNIS MATCH

(By "Veritas")

A. V. Remedios and J. Gonsalves, who took three sets from U.S.R.C. yesterday in an "A" Division league tennis match, were not only the outstanding personalities of the encounter, but gave a display worthy of placing them in the forefront of Hongkong's men's doubles partnerships.

For sometime now Club de Recreio has recognised that Remedios and Gonsalves are the two most-improved players in the club, but the public has had but fleeting opportunities of making any judgment. Yesterday it was left to two pressmen to endorse the club's opinion.

Personally I was so impressed that one big desire now is to see this couple matched against the Tsai brothers. There is every promise of the encounter being the season's best set in league tennis.

The effectiveness of Remedios and Gonsalves can be seen in the fact that whereas A. V. Gonsalves and C. A. Barretto and H. A. Barros and J. J. Remedios lost to L. Goldman and A. L. Sullivan by scores of 1-6, and 4-6 respectively, Remedios and Gonsalves beat this strong couple 6-2. And it was a quiet start and a quiet victory, for the set was over almost before one had realised it had started.

Personally I was so impressed that one big desire now is to see this couple matched against the Tsai brothers. There is every promise of the encounter being the season's best set in league tennis.

The effectiveness of Remedios and Gonsalves can be seen in the fact that whereas A. V. Gonsalves and C. A. Barretto and H. A. Barros and J. J. Remedios lost to L. Goldman and A. L. arnera, Punch Drunk, Cross-Eyed, Talks To Wignall

(By Trevor Wignall)

New York, June 8. Primo Carnera, beaten at Brooklyn just over a week ago by Negro Roy Haynes, has been seized by "punch drunkenness." He is lying semi-paralyzed in an Italian hospital in New York, but when I visited him this afternoon the first things I observed were that his eyes have become crossed, his speech is grotesquely thickened, and has difficulty in moving his head.

When Leroy Haynes beat him for the second time at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, on Wednesday of last week, he was reviled and hissed and he was assisted to his dressing-room.

Yesterday he was X-rayed, and he was ordered to hospital immediately for observation and a blood operation.

It was late in the afternoon when, after a long search, I tracked him down.

"BLACK-BLANKET" is "punch drunkenness" has left him helpless except for his arms.

"The whole thing happened so suddenly at Brooklyn," he said, "that I could not understand it. I was moving towards Haynes when something like a black blanket rapped over my eyes."

"I know I was hit, but it was not heavy punch. I fell, of course, but I had not been on the canvas for seconds before I knew I could rise. All the life seemed to have been squeezed out of me."

"The spectators thought I had fainted or was engaged in a fake, but even as they booed and howled I realised I was paralysed."

"I have had some bad days since, worse nights, but I am glad now to be out of the boxing racket; I really liked it and was never so fit for it, I hated hurting my opponents."

"THE FOOLISH" Some people said I could not fight—but why did not the fools remember that I had hit with all my power. I would have broken necks aplenty.

"When Ernie Schaefer died after a contest with me I nearly died too, so greatly was I disturbed. They called me an animal. But the only time I went properly mad was in my first fight with Strickling which you saw at the Albert Hall."

"It was you who first put me on the boxing map, and I am glad you are the first reporter to see me now at I am out of the rotten game."

"Yes, I have some money, but all I am looking forward to now is the day that will take me back to Italy. I have my way I shall never watch another fight. I am only twenty-eight, but I have had all I can stand."

"The jeering did hurt me, and the moving away of people who called themselves my friends, and who were glad enough of my company when I was sitting on top, also wound, but I suppose I must put up with that."

"This is a rather nasty end, but am very hopeful that within a few weeks I will be well again. Then I may again visit London, but not as the Primo Carnera, the fighter."

Some of those who have been connected with him have crossed him off their books. For the majority he has made considerable money, but few have even shown him the poor reverence of easing his mental torture with a bunch of flowers or a call on the telephone at his bedside which he ceaselessly watches.

Carnera did not go up quite like a rocket, but his descent has been quicker than any rocket ever accomplished. A few days ago the New York State Commission decided to bar him from further fighting in this country. This will be taken up by their controlling bodies.

NO REGRETS But Carnera does not care. He does not regret having left the circus in France to taste of the transient popularity that sport so lavishly gives, and that it so cruelly takes away.

He quite rightly says that if he had not become a boxer he would have missed the wonders of the world, would have been denied the intoxicating pleasure of listening to delirious cheering.

But there is rebellion and anger in his heart at the way he has so quickly dropped out of sight. There is no pity for him, and that is why he will insist on being carried on a stretcher to the Hotel Inter-Conte di Savoia next Saturday week.

The one person he wants to see in all the world is his mother, who lives in an elaborate house he built for her at Segual, Italy.

EARNED $200,000

He believes that since he made his debut as a boxer he has earned for himself and others more than £200,000. How much of this he has left for himself is doubtful.

Most people here think he is flat broke, but Carnera excitedly and somewhat pathetically assured me he is "well fed," and that he has sufficient cash to permit him to live quietly for the rest of his life.

Nothing him is the breach of promise case against him by Emilia Tersini, the Soho waitress, which is scheduled for yet another hearing in New York next week. Whatever the result he hopes fervently it will be the last he will ever hear of it.

Boxing's Forgotten Man is indeed laid low.

To show me he has no feeling in his left leg he pushed a needle into it. He explained that his left side from ankle to chest is numb and useless.

He does not know yet that he has concussion of the brain, that his spine is affected, and that he may end his days as a bath-chair cripple.

I sighed as I said my good-byes to the once-lauding giant, about whom I have written so much. What else was there to do?

LAWN BOWLS

CRAIG DEFEATS RIBEIRO

OPEN SINGLES

Finishing on the 31st head R. G. Craig defeated F. V. V. Ribeiro by 21 shots to 20 at the Kowloon Bowling Green Club yesterday evening. In an open singles championship tie. Both players reached a high standard of bowls.

Craig carried everything before him at the outset and it looked as if he would run away with the match when he was leading by 13 shots to seven on the 14th head, but Ribeiro staged a fine recovery and levelled the scores at 14-all on the 21st head.

At this stage, Craig made another burst after scoring a single on the 22nd head, on which his opponent was lying four. Craig's last word robbed Ribeiro of a "possible." Craig increased his lead to 19-15 on the 20th head, before Ribeiro scored a two and reduced the lead. Playing well, Ribeiro again levelled the score at 20-all on the 30th head, and was lying a single on the next head, when Craig with his last word crept in and carried the 'jack' to score the shot and win the match.

It was a splendid game, and both players were roundly applauded by the spectators.

On the Kowloon Cricket Club rink, A. M. Holland experienced little difficulty in accounting for E. M. Remedios by 21 shots to nine on the 15th head.

Holland scored on ten heads, scoring a four on the tenth head and six twos, while Remedios scored four twos.

At the Kowloon Deck Recreation Club, B. Pasto defeated W. Macfarlane by 21 shots to 13 on the 22nd head.

W. L. Walker, the conqueror of R. F. da Luz, made his exit from the tournament yesterday when he met H. F. Rosario on the Hongkong Football Club green, the Club de Recreo player winning by 22-20.

Rosario took the lead, scoring seven shots to one on the first six heads but he was overtaken at 9-8 on the 12th head, when Walker chalked up a three. The scores were 17-17 and then 20-20. Rosario scored a four on the 18th head and Walker a possible on the 20th.

In the postponed match between J. F. Lunny and E. J. Edwards the former won on Monday on the Tel-koo R.C. green by 21 shots to 12.

THE KING AND YACHTING.

KEEN INTEREST IN CRAFT ACTIVE PATRONAGE AND HELP.

The King has become Admiral of the Royal Yacht Squadron. While it is early to speculate the course he will adopt towards yachting, we may assume reasonably that His Majesty's keenness for the sport will remain undiminished, and active patronage and practical help will be given in promoting an even wider interest in a recreation so essentially British and an expression of our natural heritage—a traditional love of sea and ships.

Although the King did not take a active part in yacht racing as Prince of Wales, and the reasons were obvious while his father lived, he has always shown a general interest in the sport, and wherever possible gave famous yacht clubs Royal patronage, and in the case of the "little" yachts, the international 14-foot dinghies, takes a big practical part in their sporting fortunes by donating the Prince of Wales' Cup (still to be known by this name), the blue ribbon among international dinghies. The King thus showed his traditional desire to foster and encourage the sport of small boat racing, knowing full well, as a sportsman, the courage, physical fitness, and ability in helmsmanship required of those who race these tiny craft.

The King, as Prince of Wales, also was commodore of at least three famous clubs—the Royal Thames Yacht Club, the Royal Western Yacht Club (Plymouth), and the Royal Cornwall Yacht Club—and patron of many royal regattas. Last season His Majesty took an added interest in racing among the big international classes, and as commodore of the Royal Thames Yacht Club gave a special jubilee cup for a race around the Isle of Wight for the "J" and International 12-metre classes.

A DRIFTING MATCH

King Edward occasionally raced aboard Britannia during Cowes Week, but was rarely fortunate in the choice of a day, as it was seldom "Britannia's" meaning half a gale, and racing became a bit tedious. On one occasion I remember the King having a very soft day when aboard Britannia, writes a correspondent of the London Observer. It was aimless and stillying hot in the Solent. The good stories, by the way, handed down to the Solent Banks buoy with the tide, and there kedged till the tide turned.

I was aboard Astra, kedged almost abeam of Britannia, and felt sorry for the Royal yachtman striking such a lame patch, especially as the Prince had come down from London, that morning by air to take part in the race. However, the King enjoyed himself, as is his natural habit of making the best of every situation, and squatted on the counter with his father's guests, apparently recounting the tales of his rippling launch, which came across the narrow stretch of water, separating the other yachts from Britannia.

With his passion for extending sport among youth, I feel sure small boat sailing will be advocated by the King as one of the essential sporting expressions of a virile nation. We shall witness an extension of racing among youth, even school boys, as a result of our Sovereign's sporting advocacy.

That King Edward has a genuine love of the sea is only too apparent, as not only did he serve in the Navy, but he has probably sailed some 200,000 miles in all sorts of craft to the furthest ends of the world, and it must not be forgotten that His Majesty has cruised extensively in yachts off the coast of Spain and in the Mediterranean, as recently as last September.

LOVE OF THE SEA

His Majesty's love of the sea and its moods are seldom revealed in his speeches, but I well remember his letting himself go when receiving the Freedom of Portsmouth, and painting as fine a word-picture of arriving back in Spithead after a long voyage as one could wish to hear, and which was a happy revelation to his great audience in our premier naval port.

It has been hinted that a happy gesture for the future of yacht racing would be for the King to commission the building of a new "J" class yacht, thus continuing the active interest in our national sea sport, bequeathed by his father. A Royal "J" class racing at all the Regattas would be one of Whatever steps His Majesty takes, yachtsmen may depend it will be consistent with his traditional sportsmanship, and as the King has already assured us he intends to follow closely in the footsteps of his father, we might readily assume the popularity of yacht racing, and yachting generally will be greatly enhanced.

CHAPTER II

On this sunny afternoon the Little Towns weren't thinking about the Indians. They were drunk with excitement—the West's new name for corn blisk.

Either they had just gotten the news flash of the California gold rush, or else they had just heard that line and Roy were on their way. For every Little Town, except one, was preparing to get out of town. That one was "Big Tom" Little, who owned the town and half the Indians' wigwags. Ugh!

Little was striding up and down the crowded street, getting in everybody's way, desperately trying to persuade them to stay home, not to go to California. "I'm telling you," Little shouted at a "Little," "you'll never get there! No wagon train that ever left here was ever heard from again!"

"We ain't a-worrying!" the excited crowd shouted in reply. "You'll be sorry," Big Little taunted.

"You're just mad because you won't have anyone to rent your buildings to," called Lem Prouty. Lem was the village blacksmith. And the Indians always referred to him as the "great white father," which was something Lem never could understand. He never even got a hint from looking at his eighteen children.

"The Indians are on the warpath!" Little persisted.

"Don't you worry about us," put in another future grapefruit grower. "Hank Bewley'll get us through. They say he's one of the best scouts in these here parts."

That was true. Bewley was one of the best scouts. But it all depended what he was scouting for. Right now he was under the table in the back room of the XX (the Double-cross) Saloon, scouting for his pal, "Trigger." Only Trigger didn't live there any more. After ten days, Trigger had come to and decided to go home. He was no bar-fly!

Disgusted, Bewley tossed down a dozen Mexican Martinis and rolled back out into the street. Clanking upon the end of a covered wagon, he ordered the coxed to gather around. He was about to make a speech.

To these revving ranchers, Bewley was a combination of "Little Eva," Napoleon, and the Detroit Tigers. They trusted him, praised him, but never leaped him money. He was their friend, their leader, their guide, their palsy-walsy. As Hank stood there on the wagon the crowd cheered and shouted. Whooping it up for dear old Bewley!

"My friends," the scout began, "We're pulling out of here at dusk. (Cheers.) Remember! It takes provisions and equipment to lick the West. (More cheers.) And BLENTRY of water!" (Grousing.)

At this high light in his speech, Bewley spied his pal, Trigger, weaving in and out of the cuspids in front of the local barber shop. After shouting a few more orders to the crowd, Bewley jumped off the wagon and hurried over to his henchman.

"All ready to go, Trigger?"

"Yeah," Trigger replied quietly.

"Think this trip'll be as easy as the last one, pardner?"

"There's nothing to worry about," Bewley assured. "We lead the wagon train into Lone Gulch and Chief Cy-cine and his warriors will be there in ambush. When it's over, we get the cash—they get what's left."

Trigger was still a bit uneasy, and unsteady, too.

"Yeah, Hank, but when we went across before, the cavalry wasn't in that territory. They are now. If they catch up with us, it'll be too bad."

"Forget it, Trigger," Bewley assured with much cunning on his face. "We can always tell them we were ahead scouting, and couldn't get back."

This villainous plotting was suddenly brought to an abrupt halt by a mild roar at the east end of town. Racing, surging, thundering down Main Street of Little Town came the overland stage, with Doc and Roy at the controls.

On and on it came. Past the barber shop, past the Double XX, three times around the post office, into the hotel lobby and out onto the street again. The boys didn't know how to stop it.

Had it been a leaking radiator or a toothache, it would have been a different story. But a horse is a horse is a horse is a horse, and all their monkey wrenches couldn't stop it. Doc was ready to lower the lifeboas. But Big Tom Little stepped into the street, grabbed one of the horses, and brought the stage to a stop.

"Thanks, pardner!" Doc shouted. "I was just going to do that myself!"

As the passengers got out, the mob in the street crowded around them. There were kisses and hugs and greetings of welcome. Doc set a new record of kissing twenty-one squaws without getting shot. Roy just hugged. Hugged the dental chair and a big set of paper-mache teeth.

"Don't go away, folks!" Doc shouted. "Don't go away. Allow me to introduce myself. You are now looking at Painless Doc Pennington—the only dentist who ever attempted to fill the Grand Canyon! I don't imagine that you left a stone unturned to welcome me."

One of Lem Prouty's eighteen took aim with his sling-shot, and something hit Doc smack on the conk.

"Now, I'm sure you didn't!" Doc added quickly. "However, let me introduce my assistant, Roy Banks. We'll be ready for business just as soon as we secure an office. Get out those handbills, Roy, and let's get 'em circulated. We've got to build up our circulation!"

Immediately, Doc and Roy were off down the street, showing handbills to each and every Little Town. As the people read the bills, they broke out in laughter.

"If they expect any business here, they'll have to pull their own teeth!" chuckled something under a "ten-gallon" hat.

"They won't have no trouble getting an office, though," said another.

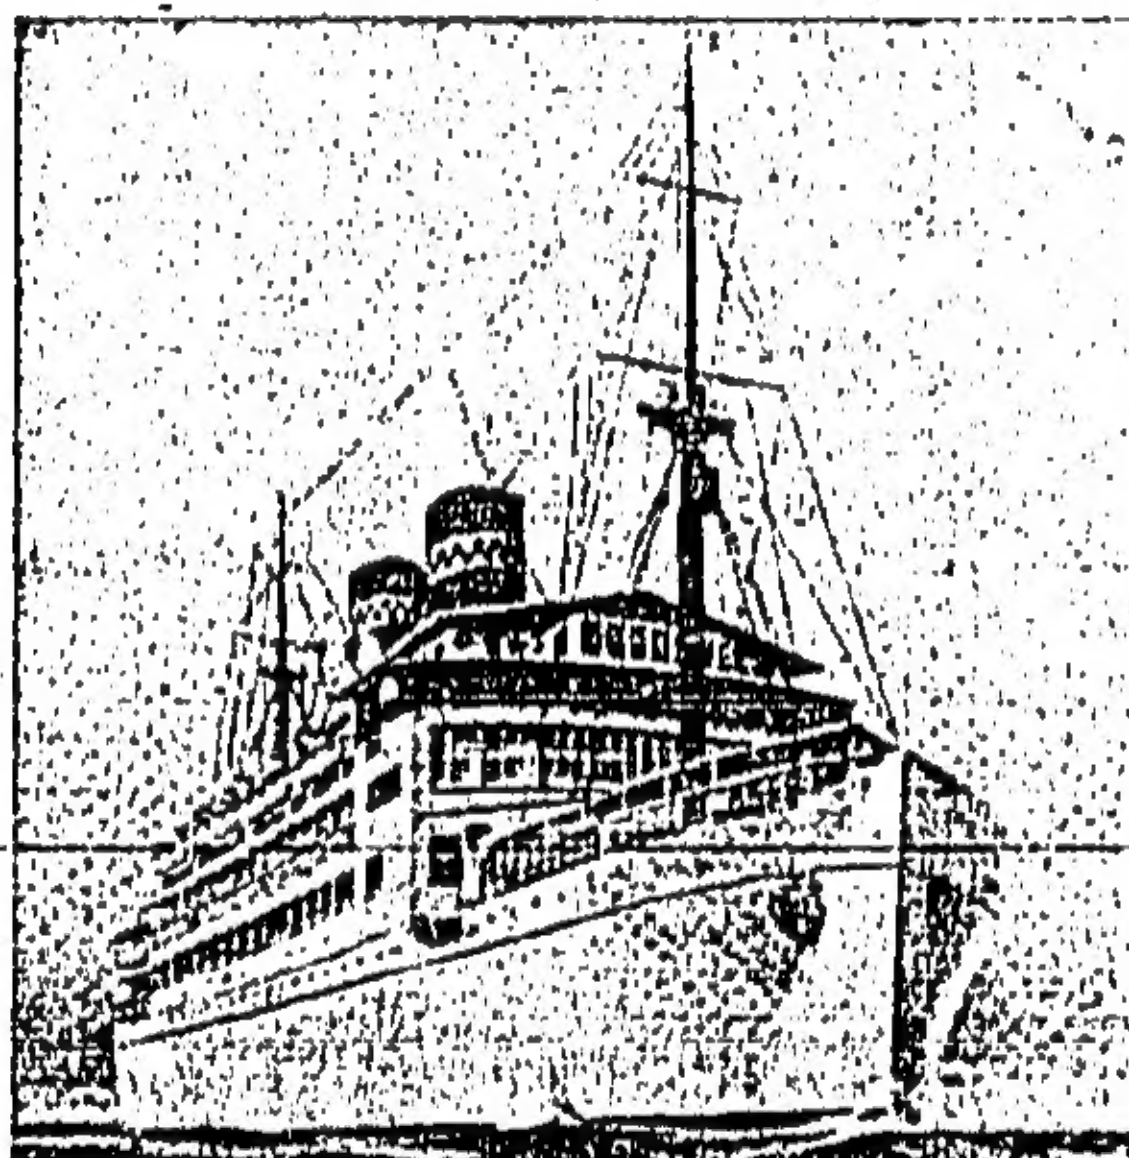

"Ha!" added a third, "they'll have the whole town to themselves."

ENGLISH GIRL'S FATE IN BELGRADE

Visit Against Father's Wish: Sister Lost For 20 Years

Belgrade, June 21. A FATHER'S romantic dash across Europe to Belgrade to find his lost daughter—the culminating point of a 20 years' search—is recalled by the death here from pneumonia of her sister, Miss Mary Arguiros, a Southend school teacher, aged 22, who came out here a few months ago to give English lessons.

Added poignancy is given to the tragedy by the fact that her father was opposed to her going to Belgrade, and had followed her here to persuade her to return home.

Her father, Mr. George Arguiros, a Greek who became a naturalised British subject before the Great War, and her mother, who came from Wales, took her to Athens in 1912 when she was three months old, and the child was lost in the confusion of the first Balkan War.

Mr. Arguiros devoted his life to looking for her, and when he found her in October 1932 in the care of a Mr. Savitch, former newspaper proprietor, who had adopted her from an orphanage, she could not speak a word of English.

SECRET ENGAGEMENT

Although Mr. Savitch begged her to stay with him in Belgrade, she returned with her father to England and lived at Southend for nearly a year. Then it transpired that she had been secretly engaged to a clerk in Belgrade, Mr. Slavko Gribich, and she returned to marry him three years ago.

JEERS MAKE A TRIBE GIVE UP CANNIBALISM

SIR HUBERT MURRAY, Governor of Papua ever since Australia took it over in 1906, has arrived in London for a holiday.

In a few weeks he will be sailing again for Papua, in spite of his 74 years, for he intends governing there for the remainder of his life.

Sir Hubert, who is the elder brother of Professor Gilbert Murray, has become almost as famous for his anecdotes of Papua as for his thirty years of peaceful government.

TAX COLLECTORS WELCOMED
He explained how he introduced a system of taxation into the country that actually made the tax-collector a welcome visitor.

"All the native taxes," he said, "go into a fund which is expended on services for the native population. The tax is assessed on the man's ability to produce valuable goods. Natives living in good coconut land near the coast might be taxed up to £1 a head. Others, in the interior, we might consider too poor to tax at all."

"Then comes the trouble. The native who is not taxed demands bitterly to know why. His neighbour, he complains, pays tax, and he is as good as his neighbour. He must pay tax too!"

Besides being the Governor, Sir Hubert is also one of the two judges. They administer the Queensland criminal code, with variations to fit local conditions. If a man commits a crime, he is punished roughly according to his standard of civilisation. A murderer from a remote village, understanding nothing of the white man's code, would probably receive a sentence of only six months' imprisonment. A murderer from a big town, who knew what he was doing, would be severely punished, perhaps hanged.

"Distinctions like that are essential," Sir Hubert said, "in a country that varies in its civilisation. The test of the system's efficiency is that, in all my thirty years in Papua, only two or three convicted murderers have ever repeated their crime."

HEAD-HUNTING

Head-hunting once the national sport of Papua, still persists in the remoter districts, and is treated as the crime of murder.

Murder is inextricably mixed up with old tribal customs. Often it can be prevented by ridicule, to which the natives are amazingly responsive. They cannot bear to be laughed at, and Sir Hubert has done much to wipe out cannibalism by setting a tribe of non-cannibals to jeer and laugh at a cannibal tribe.

"Look at him, he eats human flesh," one native will jeer at another, and those jeers are more effective than almost anything in persuading the cannibal to give up the custom.

Sorcery, which is widely practised by the natives, is punishable, not because it itself does harm, but because it so often leads to murder. The natives believe that all death is due to sorcery, and one village constable, a native himself, once arrested the village sorcerer because two carriers had been eaten by a crocodile.

These native constables are highly efficient, and very brave. One of

THERE'S MONEY IN A FALLEN LEAF

Fallen autumn leaves have a commercial value, after all. Bachelors Marsh, a town in the Australian State of Victoria which hitherto has carefully swept, stacked and burnt them have discovered this, and are exporting them to Germany.

A consignment of 200 bags, largely of elm and privet leaves has just left, says Amateur News. It appears that they are to be used in the manufacture of a certain chemical in Germany. It is all a closely guarded secret.

them, in a small party exploring new territory, when faced by thousands of possibly hostile tribesmen, remarked wryly: "What matter if they do fight. We are ten."

LYING REPORTS

Occasionally, however, their zeal goes a little too far.

"Owing to the natives' propensity for dashing in and reporting false murders," said Sir Hubert, "we have had to make it a crime to spread a lying report. One village constable came to see me, and said, 'The missionary in our village told everybody in church that there was a big fire somewhere that would burn up everybody who didn't come to church—I came to see you about it first, but I suppose I should have arrested him for spreading a lying report.'"

"Little stories that seem funny to other people are now commonplace to me, and often I do not appreciate their humour. Some time ago I was trying natives who had thrown spears at a patrol of police."

"I explained to them that they really must not throw spears at

MYSTERY OF 20,000 VANISHED HUSBANDS

EVERY YEAR 20,000 MARRIED MEN IN BRITAIN WALK OUT OF THEIR HOMES AND SIMPLY VANISH.

And the most common reason for these strange disappearances is a boyhood lust for adventure that has never quite died in their hearts.

Here is just one example:—

A Birmingham woman awoke in the early hours one morning to find her husband almost completely dressed.

WENT TO BRAZIL

"Where are you going?" she asked him in amazement.

He replied, "I'll be back soon," and left the house. She has never seen him since.

To-day, in tiny cattle town in the wild west of Brazil, behind a bar known to local inhabitants as "The Englishman's place," is that dream-eyed Birmingham man, dispensing warm beer and cane.

Even to-day he cannot say just what made him throw up everything in order to run a little rum shop in Matto Grosso. He was married and happy—until he saw an advert which spoke of Rio de Janeiro, Mobile Video, and Buenos Aires.

That night he vanished.

Probably 10,000 of this year's vanished husbands just drifted away from home to adventure.

ASTAIRE FOR LONDON

Hollywood, June 21. Fred Astaire is going to London for a six months' holiday.

He has informed his studio that he is in need of a holiday and that he intends to leave for London as soon as the film on which he is now engaged has been completed.

His contract calls for only two pictures a year, and gives him the option of deciding when to make them.—United Press.

policemen, that I had to pay and feed and clothe those policemen, and that if any had been killed, the thrower of the spears might have been hanged.

"Then they burst into tears, and told the interpreter that they would rather be hanged anyway, because if they could not throw spears at policemen there was no joy left in life for them."

"That seemed such an ordinary statement to make that for a long time I did not realise there was anything funny in it at all. Being Governor of Papua ruins one's sense of humour."
